P R E F A C E
TO THE FOURTH EDITION.

THIS edition constitutes practically a new work. The matter which before was limited to a digest of the powers inherent in officers, has now been scientifically arranged and extended so as to include those exercised under warrants and orders whether of Superior Courts or of Courts or officers having lesser jurisdiction.

The aim has been to state every power and its qualification, if any, as concisely as possible consistent with accuracy and intelligibility, so that the work may still retain the limits of a handbook, instead of extending, as it otherwise would, to those of an encyclopædia. How nearly and with what degree of success that aim has been attained must be left to others more learned than the author to determine.

It should be mentioned that the powers are those only which are exercised under the ordinary law. Where the Habeas Corpus Act is suspended and Bills of Indemnity are subsequently passed, the condition is not easily distinguishable from that of civil war. Inter arma leges silent.

The collection of Forms in the Appendix is not intended to be complete. It is rather a selection of general Forms made for the better comprehension of the relative positions from a legal point of view, of those warrants and orders which are discussed in the first part of the work.

The author has to render his best acknowledgments to his brother Mr. J. N. Chaster, of the Middle Temple, for kindly preparing the lists of statutes and cases, the Appendix and Index with which the work, which now contains over 3000 references, is supplied.

P R E F A C E

TO THE

FIRST EDITION.

THE accurate exercise and performance of their powers and duties, respectively, by executive officers, is of the essence of good government.

Partly on account of their system of payment (which is based in some cases at least on results), and of a desire to distinguish themselves and thus earn promotion, and partly on account of that imperfection which is inherent both in mankind and in all human institutions, there is, perhaps, at times a tendency among these officers, in their zeal for the service of the State, on the one hand, to exceed the authority with which the law has clothed them, and on the other to be forgetful of the obligations which are due from them to the public.

It is for those who may be in some measure, more or less, affected by such excess or breach of duty respectively, that the following pages have been collated.

THE POWERS, DUTIES, AND LIABILITIES OF EXECUTIVE OFFICERS

AS BETWEEN THESE OFFICERS AND THE PUBLIC.

INTRODUCTION.

AN executive officer, properly so called, is, I assume, an officer employed by the State to put into actual execution the laws, or some portion of the laws, of his country. Taking this as the definition upon which this work is based, it is a natural consequence that the following officers, all of whom come within the term "executive" in its wide signification, are not included within it. First, military and naval officers, who act under the orders of their commander, and who in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred are employed actively, outside the country, to deal with those foes whom it is to our interest politically to force into submission. Secondly, judicial officers, whose duty it is to interpret the laws, statutory or otherwise, but who are not themselves personally engaged in putting the laws into active operation. Thirdly, those officers whose business it is to perform purely ministerial functions and none other, such as those in the ordinary clerical establishments of our great public departments and the like, and who never, under any circumstances, come into collision, in their official capacities, with any member of the public.

Having thus positively and negatively determined shortly, what I mean in this work by the term "executive officer," I would observe that the powers which are exercised by these men, when considered in the aggregate, are enormous. They, in fact, carry on between them the whole business of active government in this country; and when we remember that every single case, either of excess of power or breach of duty towards any member of the public, contains within it as its kernel the all-important questions of the rights and liberties of the people, it will be seen that it is impossible to over-rate the necessity of closely scrutinizing their labours. Professor Dicey, in his able work on the Constitution, in this connection, says as follows:—"Unintelligent students may infer that the law of the constitution is to be gathered only from notorious judgments which embalm the results of grand constitutional or political conflicts. This is not so. Scores of unnoticed cases . . . touch upon or decide principles of constitutional law. Indeed every action against a constable or collector of revenue enforces the greatest of all such principles, namely that obedience to administrative orders is no defence to an action or prosecution for acts done in excess of legal authority."

It is impossible, having regard to the fallibility of human nature and the system of administration, to suppose that these officers are invariably in the right, or even to credit them on all possible occasions with purity of motive. Over-zeal for the public service and individual interest will, in spite of all precautions, from time to time exhibit themselves. It is against such exhibitions that this work is mainly directed. Hitherto there would appear to have been nothing like a direct exterior check upon the powers of these officers, and the natural tendency therefore is—no matter how carefully any system may be administered—not only for these men to exalt their functions as between themselves and the public, but possibly also for them to become a danger of no petty magnitude to the community.

It is for these reasons that this work has been prepared. Its object is to furnish the profession and the public with a treatise from which may be ascertained what these officers have the power to do, and what not to do, as against any member of the public, and what remedies are pursuable in case the officer has either exceeded his power or fallen short of his duty to the individual. It is conceived, therefore, that it cannot fail to be of interest and value.

The liberties of the people of this country have, it must not be forgotten, been purchased with the blood and treasure of our ancestors, and have been maintained by the mental and physical labours of thousands of earnest and good men who have preceded us. To preserve those liberties intact is both the right and duty of us all.

That this work may, in some humble degree, minister to that end, is the prayer of the author.

PART I.

WARRANTS AND ORDERS.

A WARRANT may be defined as a written authority under the hand and seal (a) of some Court, or judicial or other officer authorized by law to issue the same, commanding the person or persons to whom it is addressed to arrest or detain, or produce or release, the body, or to search the premises, or seize or levy, or suspend execution on the goods or lands of some person named therein (b).

Warrant,
definition.

In every instance save those of warrants of superior Courts at common law (c), viz. the Parliament, the High Court, and those of Assize and Arches (d), the cause of issue must appear on the face thereof; and where the process is in contempt, the period of detention be specified (e).

when.

Warrants are therefore, when regarded as to their legal effect, of two kinds, namely (1) those issued by superior Courts according to the course of the common law, and (2) those of inferior Courts at common law and of any Court or officer under statutory jurisdiction (f).

Two kinds.

The distinction between these two kinds, although rather a nice one, is important from the point of view of the liability of the officer entrusted with the execution. The principle may be thus expressed:—

Distinction

Whereas, under a warrant of the first kind, the presumption is that the Court from which it issues had jurisdiction to order the particular thing or things to be done, no matter what the order may be, so as to throw the onus of proving no jurisdiction generally on the party attacking it; in the case of a warrant of the second kind, the presumption only extends to the matter actually appearing on its face. But, in either case, if on investigation it be found that there was no jurisdiction, being beyond the scope of the powers delegated to the Court or officer diction.

(a) Those of superior Courts are sometimes not sealed.

see Hutchings v. Reeves, post, p. 60.

(b) Any warrant which purports to relate to an unknown person or where alleged offence is the cause of issue, to an offence not yet committed, is void: Leach v. Money, 19 St. Tr. 1001; Entick v. Carrington, ib. 1030; Wilkes v. Wood, ib. 1153. The only exceptions are search warrants which are generally directed against premises and not against persons; and issuing it, the warrant is bad, and no justification to the officer who executes it.

"The rule for jurisdiction is that nothing shall be intended to be out of the jurisdiction of a superior Court but that which specially appears to be so, . . . nothing shall be intended to be within the jurisdiction of an inferior Court but that which is expressly alleged" (g).

Orders of

Like

Unlike

Jurisdiction to

record.

With regard to orders, they are to be divided into two main classes, namely (1) those which are similar in form and in regard to the principles of law applicable thereto to warrants, and may therefore not improperly be classed with warrants, and (2) those which have no similarity to warrants, but constitute merely the relationship of principal and agent between the person or body issuing and the person executing them.

In regard to orders of the first kind, it has been laid down that in so far as the jurisdiction to make them, must appear on the face thereof, the rule is equally applicable to them as it is to warrants (h), and here it is to be observed that where orders are made verbally by Courts of record (i), they are presumed to be in writing, "for there is or ought to be a record of such order" (j).

As to orders of the second kind—those which constitute merely the relationship of principal and agent, they fall into a different category. They will be found discussed in a separate chapter.

Authority

The authority of every officer is dependent on the validity of the proceedings (k).

I.—WARRANTS AND ORDERS OF SUPERIOR COURTS AT COMMON LAW.

Warrants and orders of superior Courts at common law range themselves into two categories, which may sufficiently accurately be described as (1) those to which the king is a party, and (2) those to which the king is not a party. "The phrase 'where the king is a party' is not a correct statement of the law. The question is whether the process be issued at the instance of a private person in the assertion of a private right, or at the instance of a public authority in the assertion of a public right, where the public weal is interested in the execution of it" (a).

This description appears to tally (so far as concrete can with abstract law) with that given by modern writers in jurisprudence of those absolute duties which the individual owes to the State, those which are correlative with natural rights, i.e. those rights which are essential to man's existence in society; as distinguished from those relative duties which correspond with those rights which are the creatures merely of positive law, and of which it has been said that "when they have not the ethical sanction which is derivable from the laws of human life, as carried out under social conditions, they have no sacredness and may rightly be challenged."

The distinction which exists in our law between mala in se and mala quia prohibita is practically identical (b).

I.—THE KING A PARTY.

The first point which arises for consideration in regard to the execution of warrants and orders to which the king is a party, is as to the amount of force which may be employed for that purpose. And it seems quite clear that any degree of force may be resorted to which is necessary to carry the execution into effect, the onus of proving such necessity resting on the officer who resorts to it (c). Lord Ellenborough, C.J., in the case last cited, adverting to the allegation in the defence that the employment of the military was necessary to assist at the execution of a warrant of the Speaker, says: "Now what application has the military force to the entry? None at all. Not that it is not competent to use military force, or any force which may be necessary for the execution of a warrant of this kind; the degree and quality of the force must vary according to the exigency of the case. The first duty of the officer who is entrusted with the execution of process is to take care that it is executed effectually and with as little injury to the individual or to the public as may be." And in that case evidence was tendered and admitted to shew the danger and difficulty of executing the warrant by force against the plaintiff in his own house without the aid and protection of the military (d).

When it is necessary to resort to the expedient of employing the military, that force must act under the direction of the civil magistrate (e).

Military when employed, to be under magistrate. Sheriff may raise posse comitatus.

In regard to warrants of the High Court, the duty of executing which is imposed on the sheriff, it is laid down by statute that if he finds any resistance in such execution he shall take with him the power of the county and shall go in proper person to do execution, and may arrest the resisters and commit them to prison (f).

Power to break doors.

The next point is as to breaking doors. In Semayne's Case (g), it was laid down that: (1) In all cases where the king is a party the [officer] (if the doors be not open) may break the party's house either to arrest him or to do other execution of the king's process if otherwise he cannot enter. But before he breaks it he ought to signify the cause of his coming, and to make request to open the doors. (2) The house of any one is not a castle or privilege but for himself, and shall not extend to protect any person who flies to his house or the goods of any other which are brought or conveyed into his house, to prevent a lawful execution, and to escape the ordinary process of law; and therefore in such cases after denial on request made the [officer] may break the house. But he does this at his peril, for if it turn out that the defendant was not in the house, or had no property there he is a trespasser (h).

Of third person.

Officer acts here at his peril.

This protection which the law casts around dwellings is confined to dwellings only and does not extend to outhouses (i).

On escape.

After an escape a man's own house or that of a stranger is no sanctuary, and may be broken after notice of the purpose and demand of admission and refusal (j).

Breaking at what time.

According to the opinion of the Attorney-General above cited, this breaking is limited to the daytime (k), which means presumably exclusive of night and twilight (l); but in treason or felony it seems it may take place at any time (m).

Inner doors.

Having obtained admission the officer may break inner doors (n), whether the defendant be therein at the time or not (o). He may also break out in order to complete the execution (p).

Breaking out.

Although the officer may force an entrance, he is not authorized in remaining in the house more than a sufficient time to execute the warrant, and in case of an arrest, if the party be from home he is not justified in there awaiting his return (q).

Remaining on premises.

Under such a warrant execution on a Sunday is valid (r), and it seems that an officer of the law in executing process is not limited to any time of the day or night (s).

Time of execution.

There is no privilege from arrest in these cases (t). Ambassadors however, and their servants, if the servant be not carrying on business, although a British subject (u), are protected by 7 Anne, c. 12, s. 4, and clergymen attending service eundo morando et redeundo by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 36. Arrest in such cases is a misdemeanour (v).

Privilege.

When a warrant is given to a defendant for his perusal and he refuses to return it, it appears that the officer has a right to take it from him, and even to coerce his person to obtain the possession of it, provided he use no more violence than is necessary to effect that purpose (w). And the taking away of such a warrant even if not recovered does not affect the validity of the execution (x).

Officer may recover possession of warrant.

The production of a warrant is not apparently unless demanded a condition precedent to its execution (y).

Warrants of superior Courts, unless restricted by what appears upon their face, extend all over the kingdom (z).

Jurisdiction.

THE SERGEANT AT ARMS (LORDS).

This officer is employed by the House of Lords to execute its orders against persons committed for contempt (a). The order of the House is signed by the Clerk of the Parliaments, and is the authority under which the officer acts (b).

- Duty under. The order usually requires the sergeant to take into custody the person named therein, and to bring him to the bar of the House.
- Warrant of Lord Chancellor. The order of the High Court to arrest a person under attachment on a return of non est inventus by the sheriff, or to obtain the custody of a ward of Court is directed to this officer, but is seldom now issued (c). In the first case it appears that the defendant is not entitled to release without a certificate from the sergeant that his fees have been paid (d), but it is believed that all the sergeant's fees have been abolished.
- Verbal order. As has been above stated, a verbal order of the Lords to this officer is tantamount to a warrant (e).

THE SERGEANT AT ARMS (COMMONS).

- Sergeant at Arms (Commons). The warrant of the Speaker of the House of Commons is addressed to this officer (f).
- Speaker's warrant ; duty under. The duty of the sergeant is to take into custody the person named therein and to detain him during the pleasure of the House. The practice is to require the offender to attend at the bar to be discharged on payment of the fees, which are in the nature of a fine (g). He cannot, however, be detained in any case after the prorogation (h).
- Verbal order. As has been above pointed out, a verbal order of the Speaker amounts to a warrant (i). When the Speaker is accompanied by the mace he has power to order persons into custody for disrespect or breach of privilege committed in his presence (j).

THE SHERIFF.

- The Sheriff. The warrants (or, as they are usually called in this case, writs) of the High Court, save that issued on a committal for contempt, are directed to this officer. They are as follow :—

Attachment.

This writ issues to arrest for a contempt of Court (o). It is considered as issued on the first moment of the day of issue (p), and must be indorsed with a recital of the particular contempt. Attachment for contempt, indorsement,

The duty of the sheriff is to take the defendant and keep him in custody, so that he may have him in court at the return of the writ.

The property of a defendant may be taken in execution notwithstanding an attachment (q).

Where this writ had issued against a party to an action for non-compliance with an order for the delivery over of deeds and documents, the officer charged with the execution might, it was held, break the outer door of the party's house in order to execute it (r); and where a defendant was committed under sec. 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869, for non-payment of a debt, it was decided that sec. 14 of the Sheriffs Act, 1887 (s), did not apply, the attachment being not for debt, but for contempt (t). Breaking doors.

This is employed for the attachment of a contumacious clergyman, and is issued either with or without proclamations (a).

The duty of the sheriff is to take the defendant and keep him in custody pending the order of the Court.

To be produced in Court

The provisions of 5 Eliz. c. 23, s. 2, incorporated by 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, s. 1, that this writ should be brought into the Court of Queen's Bench, and there, in the presence of the justices, be opened and delivered of record to the sheriff, are not impliedly repealed by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 109, s. 26. Where, therefore, a clergyman was arrested on this writ without this formality being complied with, he was ordered to be discharged from custody (b).

Exigent.Exigent.

By this writ, which is practically obsolete, the sheriff is required to take the person named therein and render him in Court on a certain day (c).

Extent.Extent.

This writ is the one employed by the Crown to recover a debt due to itself (d).

When issued.

Under it the debtor may be taken and imprisoned, the Debtors' Act, 1869, which abolished imprisonment for debt not extending to those at the suit of the Crown (e). Arrest is not now, however, usually resorted to (f).

What may be taken. Goods.

"The sheriff is authorised to take on one writ the person, goods, lands, and debts" of the debtor (g). All goods and chattels except necessary victuals of himself and family, and oxen and beasts of the plough (h), including those conveyed away fraudulently to defeat the execution (i) and specialties (k).

Lands.

The sheriff may concurrently seize the lands of the debtor. A freehold estate (l) and that vested in trustees (m), an equity of redemption (n), and an equitable mortgage by deposit, if there is reason to believe that the mortgagee knew of the claim of the Crown (o), may be seized, and so may leaseholds either as goods or lands (p).

What may not be taken.

And it is the same with a sum of money payable on a negotiable instrument not arrived at maturity (s), and with property vested in trustees for a bankrupt (t), or assigned to creditors without fraud (u).

As to lands, where a judgment has been obtained against them before the commencement of the Crown suit, whether an elegit thereunder has been sued out or not, they are not seizable (v), nor are copyholds (w), nor those vested in a purchaser or mortgagee (x). Lands.

Under an extent against partners the rule is the same as that under a fi. fa. (y). Partners.

An appraisement must be made by a jury summoned for the purpose (z). Appraisement.

Where writs of the subject and of the Crown concur, that of the Crown takes priority so long as that at the suit of the subject remains unexecuted (a), "in other words, until the property in the goods is changed" (b). And this priority extends as against the landlord for rent due (c), and also to growing crops (d). Priority.

And where the Crown has a lien, as under the excise laws (e), it will override that of the subject (f). It is, however, only commensurate with the interest of the debtor (g), but can only be discharged by an actual bonâ fide sale (h). The fees payable are stated post (i). There is no poundage (k). Fees.

Nocumento amovendo.

- Nocumento amovendo.* This writ issues to remove a wall or other thing which has been adjudged a nuisance (r).
- When issued. The sheriff's duty is to remove the nuisance according to the terms of the writ.
- Duty.

THE TIPSTAFF.

- Tipstaff.* Warrants and orders of committal of the High Court are delivered to this officer for execution (s), and, as has been already seen, where the order is verbal, it is of equal force with a warrant (t).
- Warrants and orders of committal. Superior Courts have power to punish by fine and imprisonment for contempt, whether committed in the face of the Court or not (u). But where the warrant recites an order which is clearly informal and bad, it will afford no justification (v).
- Jurisdiction to issue. The duty of the tipstaff is to arrest the defendant, and deliver him over for detention to the gaoler.
- Duty. The fee payable on an arrest is £1 1s., together with reasonable charges for travelling, &c.
- Fee.

THE GAOLER.

- Gaoler.* The order of the Lords to this officer requires him to detain the prisoner "during the pleasure of the House" (w). The duration of the session is immaterial in this case (x).

In the case of the writs of the High Court, a statutory duty is imposed on the gaoler to detain the prisoner (a); and where a prisoner is brought up by the serjeant-at-arms, an order is (if necessary) made to turn him over to the gaoler (b). High Court.

As to the warrant of committal which is executed by the tipstaff, where the committal is by way of punishment and not by way of process, it ought to be certain as a sentence, and the term of imprisonment should be specified (c).

In the case of prisoners sentenced at the assizes, there is no warrant, but a copy of the calendar is delivered to the gaoler, and is the authority under which he detains the prisoners. This is signed by the judge (d). Assizes.

Where persons are committed for seditious libel or contempt, they are to be treated as first-class misdemeanants (e). First class misdemeanants.

But this does not apply to a prisoner committed for acting as a solicitor when not duly qualified (f).

On the receipt of a pardon or remission, or order of release, or to admit to bail, the gaoler must release according to the terms thereof (g). Pardon, release, bail.

In attachment and committal, if the term of imprisonment does not appear on the writ or order, application to the Court must be made for discharge (h); but no such application is necessary where the term does so appear (i). Discharge.

A person sentenced to imprisonment for one calendar month is entitled to be discharged on the day of the succeeding month immediately preceding the day corresponding to that from which his sentence takes effect (j). And the time runs from the date of the warrant of commitment, and not from that of the original arrest (k); and when the term expires on a Sunday, the prisoner is entitled to discharge on the preceding day (l).

2.—THE KING NOT A PARTY.

The principal point for consideration in regard to the execution of warrants and orders to which the king is not a party is as to the breaking of doors; and the general rule is, that in such cases outer doors cannot be broken.

2. King not a party.
Breaking doors.

In Semayne's case it was resolved that, (4.) "In all cases where the door is open the [officer] may enter the house, and do execution about suit of any subject either on building or on goods. But it is not lawful on request made and denial, at the suit of a common person, to break the defendant's house so as to execute any process at the suit of any subject" (a).

If an officer attempt to force his way into a house in execution of civil process, and be resisted and killed, it is manslaughter only (b).

On the other hand, where a person conceals himself or deposits his goods in the house of a third party, in order to defeat the execution, the doors of such house may be broken.

Third person's house.

In the same principal case it is laid down that, (5.) The house of any one is not a castle or privilege, but for himself, and shall not extend to protect any person who flies to his house, or the goods of any other person which are brought or conveyed into his house, to prevent a lawful execution and to escape the ordinary process of law; and therefore in such case, after denial on request made, the [officer] may break the house. But he does this at his peril; for, if it turn out that the defendant was not in the house, or had no property there, he is a trespasser (c).

Officer breaks at his peril.

These rules extend to dwellings only, and not to outhouses (d).

If he be forcibly ejected after lawful entry, he may break open to re-enter (e).

Having obtained admission, he may break inner doors, although defendant be not therein at the time (f); but he must first demand admittance (g), and cupboards, trunks, &c., may be broken (h).

Inner doors.

If by lifting the latch of the outer door or opening in the ordinary way, he enters, he is justified if he had reasonable ground (i) to believe that the execution-debtor or his goods were there (j). The lifting of such a latch, or drawing back a sliding bar in the ordinary way, is not a breaking (k).

What a breaking.

The house where the execution-debtor resides—that is, where he sleeps—may be considered to be his own house, although he is not the proprietor thereof (l).

Entry obtained by fraud. The entry is not illegal by reason only of being obtained by fraud or deceit (m).

Window. If a hole in the outer wall be intended for a window or door, the officer is justified in entering, otherwise not (n). If a window be shut, but not fastened, it may not be opened (o).

Breaking out. The officer being lawfully inside, may break the outer door in order to carry away the goods seized (p); and it has been held that, where a sheriff breaks a house to seize goods, the execution is valid, although he is a trespasser (q).

Breaking does not affect execution on goods. If the original entry is unlawful, so is the continuance there, and the officer cannot avail himself of such entry to execute a warrant of arrest (r). An arrest effected by the illegal breaking of a door is altogether void, and renders the officer liable to action not only for the breaking, but also for the assault and false imprisonment (s).

Arrest on unlawful entry. Continuing on premises more than a reasonable time, or beyond that allowed by law, is good ground for an action of trespass (t), and the officer cannot plead justification in such case (u).

Continuing in possession. As to the sheriff, if he continue in possession after the return day of the writ he becomes a trespasser ab initio (v), but this will not subject him to the allegation of a new trespass after the acts which he justifies under the execution (w).

Time. It appears that execution may take place at any time (x), but that on a Sunday is not permissible (y), except in the case of a subsequent arrest after an escape (z).

Privilege. Where privilege exists it may be claimed. But this does not concern the officer (a), except in the case of ambassadors and their servants, and clergymen, the arrest of whom as has been seen is a misdemeanour (b).

THE SHERIFF.

By 50 & 51 Vict. c. 55, s. 8 (2), the sheriff is required to execute the king's writs, and "if he shall find any resistance in such execution he shall take with him the power of the county, and shall go in proper person (e) to do execution, and may arrest the resisters and commit them to prison."

Sheriff.
Posse com.

He is bound to enter a liberty or franchise whenever the writ contains the non-omittas clause

Entering liberty.

Every sheriff shall at the expiration of his term of office make out and deliver to the incoming sheriff a correct list and account under his hand . . . of all rolls and writs in his hand not wholly executed by him (f).

Outgoing, duty of.

The incoming sheriff shall thereupon sign and give to the outgoing sheriff a duplicate of such account which shall be a good and sufficient discharge to him (g).

Incoming, duty of.

A sheriff shall not be called upon to return to any writ after the expiration of six months from the time he held office (h). No return is now to issue, but a notice to him shall have the same effect (i). He must if required give a receipt for the writ (j).

Return to writ.

Receipt.

Delivery.

This writ issues for the recovery of specific chattel property (k). If the same cannot be found the sheriff is to distrain the defendant by all his lands and chattels, and the writ is then executed in the same manner as that of distringas (l).

Delivery.
When issued.

Duty of sheriff.

A judgment does not change the property in the detained chattel until satisfaction of the value found by the judgment even though the satisfaction has been prevented by the bankruptcy of the defendant, and accordingly the plaintiff in an action of detinue was held entitled, although the defendant had become bankrupt, to have the chattel delivered to him (m).

When issued.

Inquisition to be held.

What may be taken.

Lands generally, in trust.

Subject to appointment.

Mansion.

Estates held from Crown.

Public land.

Wife's land.

No interest for subsequent writ.

What may not be taken.

Land sold or mortgaged.

Equity of redemption.

This writ is employed in the execution of process against the lands of the judgment debtor (o).

In order to ascertain the lands, the sheriff must hold an inquisition (p). There is no actual delivery in execution, but on the finding of the inquisition the sheriff returns to the writ (q).

The sheriff is to "make and deliver execution unto the party in that behalf suing of all such lands tenements, rectories, tithes (r), rents and hereditaments including lands and hereditaments of copyhold or customary tenure as the person against whom execution is so sued, or any person in trust for him, shall have been seized or possessed of at the time of entering up the said judgment or at any time afterwards or over which such person shall at the time of entering up such judgment, or at any time afterwards have any disposing power which he might without the assent of any other person exercise for his own benefit (s)."

This includes a mansion-house excepted from the leasing power of a tenant for life. Estates granted by the Crown for the maintenance of dignities with reversion to the Crown (t), land held by a public body for a public purpose (u), other than that held not for the district generally, but for a contributory place in which case it can only be taken in execution for judgment debts of such place (v), and a wife's land vested in the husband during the coverture (x).

Where lands are taken under this writ there is no interest in them seizable under a subsequent writ (y).

As to what may not be taken this includes estates vested in purchasers or mortgagees (z), an equity of redemption (a), and as to trust estates it has been held that where land is vested in a long term of years in a trustee in trust to permit a person to receive the rents and profits until default in payment of a rent-charge, or until the person should insure the premises, and in case of such default to pay to a third person out of the rents and profits a certain rent-charge, this was not seizable under an elegit against the first cestui que trust (b). But a simple trust estate even for the life of the party is seizable (c). A benefice including the glebe of a parsonage, a vicarage, or an advowson in gross, or a churchyard cannot be taken (d), but a bishop's lands probably may be (e). Trust. Ecclesiastical land.

Rent-arrears, a rent-seck or an office is exempt. For the execution creditor to be entitled to rent it must be due before the delivery of the writ to the sheriff (f). But a tenant need not attend in order for the plaintiff to sue for rent subsequently accruing (g). Rent.

A remainder or reversion is not seizable (h). Remainder or reversion.

The sheriff must make a return (i), where anything has been done under the writ (j). But such return is not necessary to complete seizure under sect. 45 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (k). Return.

There is no sale under this writ (l). No sale.

For the fees payable, see post (m). The poundage is £5 per cent. on the first £100, and £2½ per cent. afterwards (n), and this is confined to the yearly value (o). Fees. Poundage.

Fieri Facias.

This writ is employed in execution on the goods of the judgment debtor (p). Fieri facias.

Where the sheriff returns that the defendant is a beneficed clerk and has no goods or chattels or any lay fee in his bailiwick, a like writ is directed to the bishop for execution (q). When issued. Ecclesiastical.

The creditor in this case must exhaust the temporal before recourse to the spiritual goods (r). The liability of the bishop is the same as that of the sheriff (s).

Where more than one writ is in the sheriff's hands he must execute that which was first delivered to him (t), unless fraudulent, and in that case execute the other or others (u). The fraction of a day is sufficient to give priority (v). An execution levied by a special bailiff on a subsequent writ may be recovered Priority.

by the sheriff as received to his use (w). But if he is directed not to execute the first writ until a future day, he may execute another delivered before that day (x). If after execution of the first there is a surplus, this must be applied to the second and so on (y). Where a writ is renewed it is entitled to priority from the time of the original delivery (z); but while it is withdrawn he cannot enter without further instructions from the execution creditor, and may execute a subsequent writ without notice to such creditor (a).

Writ to agree with judgment.

The writ must agree with the judgment in the mandatory part (b).

Death of debtor.

If the debtor die after the writ has issued, execution may be levied on goods in the hands of the executor (c). The death of the execution creditor after the issue of the writ will not affect the execution (d).

Death of creditor.

Duty of sheriff.

The duty of the sheriff is to seize only so much as will satisfy the writ together with poundage fees and expenses (e), and interest where it is for the recovery of money at the rate of £4 per cent. from the judgment or more where agreed on (f). The sheriff must on seizure leave a man in possession until the sale takes place (g), which must be within a reasonable time (h). A seizure of part in the name of the whole is good (i).

Payment of debt.

The defendant instead of allowing the writ to be executed may pay the debt and costs (j); a tender before seizure is equivalent to payment (k).

Partners.

Where a judgment is against partners in the name of the firm, execution may issue (1) against any person who has admitted on the pleadings that he is or has been adjudged a partner; (2) against any property of the partners as such; (3) against any person who has been served as a partner with a writ of summons, and has failed to appear (l). The sheriff can only sell such assets as are seizable, not book-debts or goodwill (m).

No writ of execution against partnership property can now issue for a partner's separate debt (n).

Where an insufficient levy is made, there may be a further levy under the same writ, or a second writ may issue (o).

All goods and chattels, with certain exceptions, may be seized, provided they can be sold (p), including corn, potatoes, and other crops which yield an annual profit (q). But where growing crops had been seized and a writ of possession was subsequently delivered to the sheriff in ejectment at the suit of the landlord founded on a demise made long before the issue of the fi. fa. the sheriff was not bound to sell them as they could not be considered as belonging to the tenant (r). As to money it is laid down by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 12, that the sheriff or his officer "may and shall seize and take any money (s), or bank notes (whether of the Bank of England or otherwise), and any cheques, bills of exchange, promissory notes, bonds, specialties, or other securities for money (t), belonging to the person against whose effects such writ of fi. fa. shall be sued out, and may and shall pay or deliver to the party suing out such execution any money or bank notes which shall be so seized or a sufficient part thereof, and may and shall hold any such cheques, bills of exchange, promissory notes, bonds, specialties, or other securities for money as a security or securities for the amount by such writ of fi. fa., directed to be levied and raised," and after providing for the manner of recovery, continues, "and may and shall pay over to the party suing out such writ the money so to be recovered, or such part thereof as shall be sufficient to discharge the amount by such writ directed to be levied, and if after satisfaction of the amount so to be levied together with sheriff's poundage and expenses any surplus shall remain in the hands of such sheriff or other officer, the same shall be paid to the party against whom such writ shall be so issued."

be taken.
Corn, &c.

Money.

In the case of a ship, seizure before sale is apparently not necessary (u).

Chattel interests such as leases for years are seizable (v); but a tenant cannot be turned out of possession when he has taken a term, under an execution against the landlord (w), nor to give place to a purchaser (x). As to fixtures, those which may be removed by the tenant during his term may be seized and sold in execution against him, and these include arras hangings (y),

Under the Agricultural Holdings Act, engines, machinery, fencing, &c., erected by the tenant on such a holding are prima facie his property, and therefore liable to be taken in execution against him (k), provided that all rent is paid, the removal does not cause damage, and such damage is made good, and the landlord on a month's notice, elects not to purchase the same.

As to what may not be taken, it appears that actual necessities such as tools, bedding, &c., to the value of £5 are exempt (l), as also is straw threshed or unthreshed, or any straw of crops growing, or any chaff colder. or turnips, or manure, compost ashes or seaweed in any case whatever, or hay, grass or grasses, whether natural or artificial, nor any tares, or vetches, nor any roots or vegetables being produce of such lands in any case where according to any covenant or written agreement entered into and made for the benefit of the owner or landlord of any farm, such hay, &c., ought not to be taken off or withholden from such lands, or which by the tenor or effect of such covenants or agreements ought to be used or expended thereon, and of which covenants or agreements such sheriff or other officer shall have received a written notice before he shall have proceeded to sale (m).

taken.
Necessaries.
Farm
stuffs.

Things which yield no annual profit, or which are produced without man's labour (n)—clover, rye, or artificial grass growing under corn, and meadow grass or fruit growing—are exempt (o). So also are goods which do not actually belong to the defendant (p), or which have passed without fraud under a bill of sale (q). These must be registered to be valid within seven days of execution (r). And in these cases the sheriff is not bound to interplead, but is at liberty to withdraw, though the value of the goods seized exceed the sum secured by the bill of sale (s).

In hands of sheriff. Goods sold. Goods lent.

As to husband and wife, since the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, their property respectively continues separate in the absence of settlement. By sect. 14 a husband is liable for the debts of his wife, and for all contracts entered into, and for all wrongs committed by her before marriage, including any liabilities to which she may be subject under the Companies Acts to the extent of all property whatsoever belonging to her which he shall have acquired or become entitled to from or through her, after deducting therefrom any payments made by him and any sums for which judgment may have been bonâ fide recovered against him in any proceeding at law in respect of any such debts, contracts, or wrong, for or in respect of which his wife was liable before her marriage (w). By 25 & 26 Vict. c. 89, s. 163, where any company is being wound up by or subject to the supervision of the Court, any execution put in force (x) against the estate or effects of the said company after the commencement of the said winding-up shall be void. Except by leave of the Court (y). Where the sheriff was in possession before, but received moneys after the commencement of the winding-up, he was ordered to account to the liquidator for all moneys so received (z). Company's effects.

By 30 & 31 Vict. c. 127, s. 4, the engines, tenders, carriages, trucks, machinery, tools, fittings, materials, and effects, constituting the rolling-stock and plant used or provided by a company for the purposes of the traffic on their railway, or of their stations or workshops shall not, after their railway, or any part thereof, is open for public traffic, be liable to be taken in execution. And this includes the case of plant going over to the contractor on completion of the line (a).

A cost-book mining company is a partnership only (b).

Where taxes are in arrear the goods are not seizable unless the execution creditor before sale or removal pay the collector such arrears, provided they be not claimed for more than one year (c). Taxes in arrear.

Where rent is in arrear the goods cannot be taken unless before removal such arrear be paid to the landlord, provided the claim be not for more than one year (d). And this is extended in the case of weekly tenements, or in that of any term less than Rent in arrear.

Tenant's

Where a tenant's fixtures become the property of the landlord by the terms of the Agricultural Holdings Act not having been complied with (g), they cannot be seized in execution against the tenant.

Landlord,

As to the above-cited statute of Anne, it has been held not to apply to a ground landlord (h), but it does to a lessee and under-tenant (i). It also applies to forehand rents (j).

of claim.

The tenancy must be actually in existence at the time of seizure (k), but the claim of the landlord is confined to rent due at that time (l). The sheriff must have notice of such claim while the goods are in his hands (m), or knowledge thereof, which is equivalent thereto (n). The goods must be actually removed for the Act to apply (o), and the fact that a sufficient distress remained is no defence (p). In such case the sheriff's duty is to withdraw (q), unless the landlord's agent takes from the officer an undertaking and consents to the sale (r).

The sheriff must inquire into the bona fides of the claim (s); but the execution-creditor, if he assents to the proceedings, cannot afterwards turn round if a mistake has been made (t).

shall on request deliver the goods, and any money seized or received in part satisfaction of the execution, to the official receiver or trustee under the order, but the costs of the execution (x) shall be a first charge on the goods or money so delivered, and the official receiver or trustee may sell the goods, or an adequate part thereof, for the purpose for satisfying the charge. (2.) Where under an execution in respect of a judgment for a sum exceeding £20, the goods of a debtor are sold, or money is paid in order to avoid sale, the sheriff shall deduct the costs of the execution (x) from the proceeds of the sale or the money paid, and retain the balance for fourteen days (y); and if within that time notice is served on him (z) of a bankruptcy petition having been presented against or by the debtor, and a receiving order is made against the debtor thereon, or on any other petition of which the sheriff has notice, the sheriff shall pay the balance to the official receiver, or, as the case may be, to the trustee, who shall be entitled to retain the same as against the execution creditor.

Where the sheriff is in possession under several writs, and receives notice as above, only those writs are entitled to be paid which are for less than £20, and which would have been paid had not bankruptcy supervened (a). And where he has several writs it is immaterial under which he sells (b).

The goods must be sold within a reasonable time after seizure (c) and before the return of the vend. exp. (d). He is responsible for their safe custody until sale (e). The sale must be for not much below the real value (f), and is for ready money and immediate delivery. He is not therefore justified in selling more than necessary to satisfy the writ on the speculation that the actual delivery may be prevented by loss or accident (g). If an adequate price be obtained they must be sold, and the plaintiff may be the purchaser (h). If not sold he must return that they remain in his hands for want of buyers (i).

- Payment. If payment is made to the sheriff before sale, that is a bar to further execution (m).
- Farm produce. By 56 Geo. 3, c. 50, s. 3, the sheriff may sell the crops or produce mentioned in sec. 1 (n) subject to an agreement to expend it on the land.
- Auction
advertised. By 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 145, where the sheriff sells goods of a debtor under an execution for a sum exceeding £20 (including legal incidental expenses) the sale shall, unless the Court from which the process issued otherwise orders, be made by public auction and not by bill of sale or private contract, and shall be publicly advertised on and during three days next preceding the day of sale.
- Fees. This section does not seem to apply where the goods are sold to levy a sum not exceeding £20, including legal incidental expenses, although judgment has been entered for a greater sum (na), but it could probably not be evaded by selling portions at different times of less than £20 if the total to be levied exceeded that amount (nb).

The sheriff's duty is to deliver the property to the plaintiff, and for this purpose he must remove all persons off the premises unless the plaintiff recovers only an undivided portion, in which case he cannot turn persons out of possession, but can only put the plaintiff in possession of the portion to which he is entitled (t). Jurisdiction. The jurisdiction extends to England and Wales and three miles from the coast (i). Where the officer, on finding that the vessel had sailed, pursued her, and overtaking her within the jurisdiction, seized her, brought her back into port and dismantled her, the arrest was held illegal (j), and so also was a subsequent detention effected by parties acting in concert with the original arresters, after she had been so brought back into port (k).

Arrest after departure.

Service of warrant. Service of the warrant must be made, and this is done by affixing it to the mast or hull (l). An arrest so effected extends not only to the vessel (m), but to sails and rigging taken on shore for the purpose of safe custody (o), and all other things of a like kind appurtenant to the ship, but in salvage cases the personal luggage of passengers is exempt (p), and so are seamen's clothes (q).

Arrest of cargo The cargo may be proceeded against in respect of liability attaching to it, or simply as security for freight which is due (r), and part may be seized for that due on the whole (s). If the cargo be on board and proceeded against specifically and named in the warrant, or if not so named, is proceeded against for freight, the arrest of the ship arrests the cargo (t). But if landed and warehoused or transhipped it is otherwise, and here service must be effected by placing the warrant on the cargo, or if access to it be refused, by leaving a copy with the custodian thereof (u).

II. WARRANTS AND ORDERS OF SUPERIOR COURTS, NOT AT COMMON LAW: OF INFERIOR COURTS AND OFFICERS GENERALLY.

Warrants and orders of superior Courts, not at common law: of inferior Courts and officers generally.

As was stated at the outset of the last chapter warrants and orders of superior Courts, not at common law, of inferior Courts and officers generally, occupy in law a position different from those of superior Courts which issue according to the course of the common law. In regard to these last, all that the officer has to do is to satisfy himself that the warrant or order issues in a due and regular manner, and he will then be justified in executing it, for "he ought not to examine the judicial act of the Court, whose servant he is, nor exercise his judgment touching the validity of the process in point of law, but is bound to execute it, and is therefore protected by it (a).

Necessary ingredients therefore.

Cause of issue, period of detention, facts giving jurisdiction.

Certain date, apt conclusion.

But when we come to consider warrants and orders which issue under statutory authority, or of inferior Courts at common law, the case is different, and the reason for this distinction is that in the case of Courts and officers other than the superior Courts acting according to the course of the common law, the maxim Omnia præsumuntur ritè esse acta does not apply to give jurisdiction (b). Such a warrant or order therefore must contain not only the cause of issue and the period of detention (if any) (c), but facts sufficient to shew jurisdiction to make the particular order must also appear on the face of the instrument (d), otherwise it is no justification to the officer who executes it (e).

The mittimus ought to have these circumstances. It must contain a certain cause, and therefore, if it be for felony, it ought not to be generally pro feloniam, but it must contain the special nature of the felony, so that it may appear to the judges upon a habeas corpus whether it be felony or not. It must have a certain date, and an apt conclusion (f), such as "him safely to keep until he may be dealt with by law" (g).

Where commissioners committed a bankrupt for not answering questions, the Court ordered his discharge, as the questions were not specified so that the Court might judge of their legality (h). And where a warrant left a blank for the Christian name of the person to be apprehended, giving no reason for the omission, it was held too general, and a resistance to such an arrest lawful, and the killing of the person attempting to execute it not murder (i). But a warrant to arrest a party to the end that he may become bound at the next sessions has been held to mean those next after the arrest, and therefore the officer may in such case justify an arrest after the sessions next ensuing the date of the warrant (j). It can, however, only be executed by the person to whom it is addressed (k).

To be executed by addressee.

Where it appears on the face of the proceedings that there is jurisdiction, it will be intended that the proceedings are regular (l), otherwise no such intendment will be made (m). And where the Court or officer has merely proceeded erroneously in the issue of process, but not without jurisdiction, the executing officer will be justified (n).

Where proceeding deemed regular. Erroneous process.

There appears to be no distinction between warrants and orders so far as regards the question of jurisdiction (o). In orders as well as in warrants the facts conferring jurisdiction must appear thereon. "We cannot intend for or against the order, but must decide according to the words. However high the authority may be where a special statutory power is exercised the person who acts must take care to bring himself within the terms of the statute. Whether the order be made by the Lord Chancellor or by a justice of the peace, the facts which gave the authority must be stated" (p).

No distinction between warrants and orders as to jurisdiction.

And where any Act confers a power to make, grant, or issue any instrument, expressions used in the instrument are, unless the contrary intention appears, to have the same respective meanings as in the Act conferring the power (q).

There is, however, an important distinction which must be here pointed out between the cases where warrants and orders of the class we are now considering, issue (1) after adjudication, and (2) where there has been no adjudication. And this distinction is mainly important in regard to the liability of the officer who executes the process. It may be thus stated:—

True distinction is between warrants and orders, where issue (a) after adjudication, (b) where no adjudication.

Where an officer executes a warrant or order made under statutory jurisdiction, or of an inferior Court at common law, after an adjudication, he is protected where it appears on the face of the instrument that (1) the Court or person from which it issues had jurisdiction, or (2) apparently had jurisdiction to issue such warrant or order (r).

Where, however, he executes such a warrant or order where there has been no previous adjudication, the protection is confined to the case only where the jurisdiction to make it appears on the face of the instrument, and in the event such jurisdiction has been properly exercised, and does not extend to the second case above-mentioned, namely, where it reasonably appears to have been within the jurisdiction, although it subsequently turn out to be in excess of it (s).

This, therefore, constitutes the main dividing line between the classes of warrants and orders we are now considering, and we shall therefore proceed to discuss them under those heads respectively.

A.—AFTER ADJUDICATION.

A. After
tion.

Two kinds.

These warrants and orders range themselves into the same two categories as do those of superior Courts at common law, namely, (1) those to which the king is and (2) is not a party. It will not be necessary here to re-enumerate the incidents which specially appertain to those two classes, as that has been already done in the last chapter (t). Where the king is a party it matters not of course whether the particular warrant or order issues at common law or under statutory authority, or from a superior or an inferior Court. In either case the incidents and powers attendant on its execution are identical. And it is the same with those to which the king is not a party.

is.

As to what is an adjudication, the principle contained in the maxim audi alteram partem is here applicable (u). It has been laid down that no man is to be condemned, punished, or deprived of his property in any judicial (v) or other similar proceeding (w) unless he has had opportunity of being heard (x). And this rule has been held to apply to judges of inferior Courts (y), to justices (z), and to cases arising under the Metropolis Management Act (a). It prevails universally unless excepted by the express wording of the Act conferring the power (b).

1.—THE KING A PARTY.

THE SHERIFF.

Courts of assize and quarter sessions are authorized to issue to this officer a writ (or warrant) for the recovery of fines, estreats, recognizances, and the like (e).

This writ, the form of which is settled by the schedule to the Act 22 & 23 Vict. c. 21 (d), empowers the sheriff to levy the amount of the fine, &c., and, in the event of such amount not forthcoming, to take the defendant and lodge him in gaol until payment or until discharged by due course of law.

If the defendant be not in his county he may issue his warrant to the sheriff of the county where the offender is found, who is required to execute it (e).

THE TIPSTAFF.

The warrants of the Bankruptcy Division of the High Court are addressed to this officer. Tipstaff.

By the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, sects. 24 & 25, the judge of that division has power to commit a debtor for offences against those sections, and the powers under such warrants are expressly made equivalent to the class now under consideration (f).

And orders made under sect. 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869, for the committal of a defendant also fall within this class (g).

This order does not apply in case of non-payment by a married woman of a judgment-debt payable out of her separate estate under 45 & 46 Vict. c. 75, s. 1 (2) (h).

There must be evidence of means to pay, but it is not necessary that those means should have been derived from the debtor's earnings or a fixed income (i), and it is sufficient if there has been the means to pay any part of it (j).

It includes costs (k), and may be exercised if payment is to be by instalments (l). It need not be executed within a year, but remains in force as long as the judgment (m).

THE HIGH BAILIFF.

High Bailiff (n). The warrants and orders of the County Court in this category are the following :—

Committal in Equity and Admiralty. Warrants of committal under the Equity or Admiralty jurisdiction (o), the jurisdiction here being as great as that of the High Court (p), whether the order be final or interlocutory (q).

Bankruptcy. Under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 100, this Court has all the powers of the Bankruptcy Division, and its orders may be enforced in like manner (r).

Contempt. Warrants of committal for wilful insult to the judge or any juror, or witness, or any registrar, bailiff, or officer of the Court, or in going to or returning from the Court, or wilful interruption of the proceedings of the Court, or other misbehaviour in Court (s).

To observe to a judge in the course of, and in reference to his judgment, that "that is a most unjust remark," is an insult, and if not withdrawn amounts to such a wilful insult as is contemplated by these sections (t).

Verbal order. The judge may under these sections verbally order this officer to take into custody the offender and detain him until the rising of the Court. And such order amounts to an adjudication as to the fact of wilful insult (u).

Orders under Debtors Act, s. 5. Orders of committal made under sect. 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869. These must be exercised only by a judge or his deputy, and by an order made in open Court shewing on its face the ground on which it is issued (v). The order need not be then and there drawn up (w).

CONSTABLES.

Constables. The warrants and orders of this class which are executed by these officers are :—

Committal by quarter sessions. Those of quarter sessions who may commit by order to the custody of its officers without warrant "for there is or ought to be a record of such commitment, and the order given sedente

The coroner has power to order the arrest by warrant of a person found by the verdict of the jury guilty of murder or manslaughter (z), also of a witness for contempt of a summons (a), or for refusing to (1) give evidence, (2) sign his information, or (3) enter into recognizances (b). Warrant of coroner.

Inferior Courts of Record have power to commit for contempt only when committed in the face of the Court (c). Inferior Courts, power in contempt.

Justices may order arrest by warrant for not appearing to a summons or to answer a charge (d). And warrants of commitment either for punishment or for trial other than in civil matters (e) fall in this category (f). They must be executed by the constable to whom addressed (ff), and no conditions can be annexed by the justices to the performance of the duty imposed, which the law does not warrant (g). Committal by justices.

The warrants of distress which issue on a conviction or order by justices, other than those issued in civil matters, are to be here included (h). Distress warrants.

The conviction or order is enforced by this means in all cases save those under the Game, the Malicious Injury to Property and Person and a few other Acts, where the statute neither directs the same to be so levied or no mode of levying the penalty is provided (i).

By 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 43 (1), these warrants are to be executed by or under the direction of a constable, (2) save so far as the person against whom the distress is levied otherwise consents in writing, the distress shall be sold by public auction, and five clear days at least shall intervene between the making of the distress and the sale, and where written consent is so given as aforesaid, the sale may be made in accordance with such consent. (4.) Subject to any directions to the contrary given by the warrant of distress, where the distress is levied on household goods, the goods shall not, except with the consent in writing of the person against whom the distress is levied, be removed from the house until the day of sale, but so much of the goods shall be impounded as are in the opinion of the person executing the warrant sufficient to satisfy the distress, by affixing to the articles a conspicuous mark. . . .

(7.) A constable charged with the execution of a warrant of distress shall cause the distress to be sold, and may deduct out of the amount realised by such sale all costs and charges actually incurred in effecting such sale (j), and shall render to the owner the overplus, if any, after retaining the amount of the sum for which the warrant was issued, and the proper costs and charges of the execution of the warrant.

(8.) Where a person pays or tenders to the constable charged with the execution of a warrant of distress, the sum mentioned in such warrant, or produces the receipt for the same of the clerk of the Court of summary jurisdiction issuing the warrant, and also pays the amount of the costs and charges of such distress up to the time of such payment or tender, the constable shall not execute the warrant.

By sect. 21 (2) wearing apparel and bedding of a person and his family, and, to the value of £5, the tools and implements of his trade, shall not be taken.

In the event of another and civil execution being in at the same time, these warrants being ones in which the king is interested have priority (k).

EXCISE.

The sale under a levy warrant must take place between four and eight days after issue, unless the penalties or sums are sooner paid or satisfied (l).

The officer making such levy is to deduct the penalty or sum for which such levy shall be made, and all reasonable charges and expenses attending such levy, and return the overplus to the proprietor of the goods, and such officer shall if required shew the warrant to the person upon whose goods the levy shall be made, and suffer such person to take a copy thereof (m).

(j) Sub-s. (5) imposes a summary penalty of £5 for excessive charges or other exaction.

TAXES.

Warrants of the commissioners for levying distresses on non-payment of taxes and of commitment of defaulters are executed by the collectors (p).

Taxes.

By 42 & 43 Vict. c. 19, s. 86 (3), a levy or warrant to break open shall be executed by or under the direction and in the presence of the collector.

(6.) The powers conferred by 33 Geo. 3, c. 55, may be employed under this Act. These powers are contained in sect. 3, which was repealed by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 36, but which it is presumed is revived by this sub-section. In the event of no sufficient distress being found in the district, it authorizes a justice of a foreign jurisdiction to back the warrant in order that distress may be levied there.

Prisoners committed for contempt of Court are to be treated as first-class misdemeanants (x).

The warrant of the Secretary of State and of the County Court (y), and the order of the Court to bring up a prisoner for trial (z) go to this officer. The two first-mentioned are made of equal force with a habeas corpus (a).

The Secretary of State may issue a warrant to remove an insane prisoner to an asylum (b), and a justice to remove a prisoner to a reformatory school (c).

As to the discharge of prisoners, see ante (d).

In such case it has been held that the high bailiff is not liable for the act of his officer (g).

Admiralty.

The warrant in Admiralty matters is to arrest and detain a ship or cargo pending the further order of the Court (h).

Service of the warrant is to be effected in the same manner as that in the High Court (i), and the warrant may be executed on Sunday, Good Friday, or Christmas Day (j). Service by a clerk in the high bailiff's office is irregular (k).

The property must be released on receipt of an order to that effect (l); but in a salvage action the property must be first appraised unless the plaintiff otherwise consents (ll).

Execution on Goods.

This warrant authorizes the officer to levy or cause to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the defendant, the sum recovered by the judgment and the costs of the execution (n).

Execution on goods.

Under it, the officer may seize and take any of the goods and chattels of such person (excepting the wearing apparel and bedding of such person or his family, or the tools and implements of his trade to the value of £5), and any money or bank notes, cheques, bills of exchange, promissory notes, bonds, specialties, or securities for money (o).

What may be taken.

Such securities are to be held by the high bailiff as security for the amount directed to be levied (p).

The execution is to be superseded on the payment of the debt and costs (q).

Execution superseded.

A claimant of goods taken in execution must deposit their values or pay the costs of keeping possession in order to prevent their being sold (r).

Landlord. If within five clear days from the taking in execution or before removal, the landlord claim in writing for rent in arrear, the bailiff shall in addition distrain for the rent so claimed and the costs thereof, and shall not within five days sell unless the goods be perishable or on request in writing of the defendant. On sale, he shall pay first the costs, then the landlord four weeks where weekly rental, two terms where less than a year, or one year in any other case, and then the amount for which the warrant issued (s).

This section does not authorize the distraint and sale of goods of a stranger (t), where the bailiff is wrongfully in possession, but where he is rightfully in possession it is otherwise (u).

Bailiffs as brokers. The bailiffs may act as brokers and take the poundage allowed by the Act (v).

Sale. As above stated the sale is not to take place until the end of five days, and in the meantime the goods are to be deposited by the bailiff in some fit place, or remain in the custody of a fit person approved by the high bailiff. The sale must be made by one of the brokers or appraisers appointed under the Act (w).

In the case of a ship, an inventory and valuation must be first made and on completion of the purchase the high bailiff must if required execute a bill of sale to the purchaser at his expense (x).

Priority. Where execution issues from the High Court and County Court the writs take priority in order of time (y).

Bankruptcy. Where bankruptcy supervenes, the execution is superseded in the same manner as in the High Court (z).

Fees, &c. For the fees and poundage payable to this officer, see post (a).

Possession.

Possession. This warrant is employed in actions for the recovery of land (b).

Entry under. It authorizes the high bailiff to give possession, and for this purpose he may enter on the premises with such assistants as he shall deem necessary between 9 A.M. and 4 P.M. (c).

Continuance of warrant. The warrant is to bear date next after the day named by the judge for delivery of possession, and is to continue in force for three months (d).

CONSTABLES.

The warrants and orders of justices in civil matters fall within this category (f). Constables.

Commitments for non-payment of rates are in the nature of civil process (g), and so also it has been held is a conviction on an information for not delivering up books to a town-council (h). Commitment in civil matters. And it is the same with all cases of civil debts (i).

The constable must have the warrant in his possession at the time of executing it (j).

The powers under warrants of distress have been already enumerated (k). Distress.

In the case of recovery of tenements the warrant commands them within not less than twenty-one or more than thirty days of its date to enter the premises (by force if needful), and give possession to the landlord or agent. Such entry is not to be made on Sunday, Good Friday, or Christmas Day, nor except between 9 A.M. and 4 P.M. (l). Recovery of tenements. Entry by force. Time.

In the Metropolis a justice may order a constable to execute an order with reference to nuisances in which cases the officer is to be in the same position as an officer of the local authority (m). Nuisance.

GAOLERS.

The only warrants of this class addressed to these officers are commitments in civil matters. The persons so detained are in the class of debtors. The duty of the gaoler in such case is pointed out infra (n). Gaolers. Civil commitments. Debtors.

OVERSEERS.

Warrants of distress for poor-rates are executed by these officers (o). Paid assistant overseers have the same powers as overseers (p); but local collectors of rates have not. In this case the Summary Jurisdiction Act applies and the warrant must be executed by a constable (q). Overseers. Paid assistants. Local collector.

- Levy. The goods of any person assessed and refusing to pay poor-rates may be levied not only in the place for which such assessment was made; but in any other place within the same county or precinct, and if sufficient distress cannot be found within the said county or precinct on oath made before some justice of any other county or precinct (which oath shall be certified under the hand of such justice on the said warrant), such goods may be levied in such other county or precinct by virtue of such warrant or certificate (r).
- In the county.
- In another county.
- Demand. There must be a demand before levy (s), and that of the exact sum demanded (t), but it need not be personal (u). There can, however, apparently be no levy upon the representative of a person who dies before it is paid (v). Money may be distrained as well as goods (vv).
- Costs. The cost of the levy and of the broker or other officer for his attendance may also be levied (w).
- Appeal. On appeal from any poor-rate which is either amended or quashed, the sum assessed may notwithstanding be levied and applied in satisfaction of the next effective rate (x). Notice of appeal does not prevent distress; but no greater sum shall be proceeded for than that assessed in the last effective rate (y).
- Bill of sale, effect of. As to the effect of a bill of sale, see ante (z).
- Bankruptcy. Where bankruptcy supervenes there is no power to distrain; but the claim must be proved as a debt which is entitled to preferential payment (a).
- Company. Distress levied against the estate or effects of a company in liquidation is void (b). But where they had levied an injunction was refused unless the liquidator paid the amount due (c).
- Excessive charges. By 57 Geo. 3, c. 93, s. 1, distresses for rates under £20 are not to be charged for otherwise than as in the schedule thereto (d).
- Removal of paupers. Orders for the removal of paupers are addressed to these officers or the guardians (e).
- Such orders must contain description of the pauper (f), and actual chargeability (g); but not the grounds on which the justices arrive at their conclusion (h).

HIGHWAY SURVEYORS.

The power of highway surveyors for the recovery of rates for the highway is the same as that of overseers (i). Highway surveyors.

Where the surveyor distrained for this rate under the warrant of a justice against a person not liable to pay he was held liable for executing the warrant (j). But a rate not appealed from may be enforced (k). Highway rate.

The certificate of justices for diverting or stopping up a highway also falls in this category (l). This must be confirmed by Quarter Sessions. The certificate must state actual inspection by the justices (m), together (n), and consent of the owner (o). It must not delegate to the surveyor a discretion (p), and no part of any consecrated ground may be taken (q). Diverting highways.

And a licence from justices for gathering stones (r), and materials (s), belongs to this class. And so also does an order to lop trees (t). Such an order does not confer a power to top (u). Materials.

The coroner has power at common law to issue a warrant requiring these officers to exhume the body of a person within a reasonable time after burial upon which it is his intention to hold an inquest (e).

Orders of the Privy Council issue directing such acts to be done by and under the direction of the churchwardens or such other person as may have the care of any vaults or places of burial, as shall prevent them from becoming or continuing dangerous or injurious to the public health (f). For removal of dead body.

This section seems to be relied on by the Secretary of State as a sufficient authority to him to order exhumation in any case where that course appears desirable or necessary. This is, perhaps, doubtful.

CONSTABLES.

The following warrants and orders of this class are executed by constables.

Constables.

The Secretary of State issues his warrant under the Extradition Act (j), and any person to whom such warrant is directed may receive, hold in custody, and convey within the jurisdiction of the foreign State the criminal mentioned therein; and if the criminal escapes out of any custody to which he may be delivered on or in pursuance of such warrant, he may be retaken in the same manner as any person accused of any crime (k).

This Act applies only subject to treaty (l), and generally not to offences of a political character (m). If the description of the offence is sufficient, the warrant will be good (n). A person already in custody may be detained (o).

The Act applies to all persons of whatever nationality committing the specified crimes in the treaty countries, unless by treaty specially exempted (p).

The offences in the schedule to the Act (q) are all indictable by our law.

Also under the Fugitive Offenders Act (r), and in this case there is the same proviso as to retaking on an escape (s).

Where the property sought for is found on the premises searched, a warrant of apprehension seems to be involved in this warrant, so that the arrest (if any) would take place under the warrant, and not of the constable's own motion (s). But if he seizes other property than that named, he will be liable to an action of trespass (t); and so also will he be if he stay an unreasonable time on the premises (tt).

In connection with this branch there are two cases which require special mention, the first being that of stolen property, and the second that of explosives.

As to stolen property, it is laid down that a constable may, when duly authorized by any chief officer of police, search and seize and secure any property he may believe to have been stolen, in the same manner as he would be authorized to do if he had a search warrant, and the property seized (if any) corresponded to the property described in such search warrant.

Stolen property, order of chief officer of police.

It shall be lawful for any chief officer of police to give such authority as aforesaid in the following cases or either of them:—

(1.) When the premises to be searched are, or within the preceding twelve months have been, in the occupation of any person who has been convicted of receiving stolen property or of harbouring thieves; or,

Premises occupied by convicted persons.

(2.) When the premises to be searched are in the occupation of any person who has been convicted of any offence involving fraud or dishonesty, and punishable by penal servitude or imprisonment.

And it shall not be necessary for such chief officer of police, on giving such authority to specify any particular property, but he may give such authority if he has reason to believe generally that such premises are being made a receptacle for stolen goods (u).

As to explosives, any officer of police who has reasonable cause to suppose that any offence against the Explosives Act is being committed in respect of any carriage (not being on a railway), or any boat conveying, loading, or unloading any explosive, and that the case is one of emergency, may stop, enter, inspect, and examine such carriage or boat, and generally take such precautions as may be necessary to remove any danger, as if the explosives were liable to forfeiture.

Explosives.

In such case he is to be in the same position as if armed with a search warrant granted under this Act (v).

Similar power is conferred on constables or any officer authorized by the local authority in the case of the hawking of petroleum (w). Here the amount conveyed is not to exceed twenty gallons, to be in closed vessel, which must be properly ventilated; lights not to be brought near; carriage not to permit of escape; escape into part of house or drain to be pre-Petroleum.

(u) Chief officer means in London the commissioners; elsewhere the chief constable, or other officer in command or any person authorized by him: 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, ss. 16, 20.

(v) 38 & 39 Vict. c. 17, s. 75. By s. 73, a superintendent or a government inspector may, in case of emergency, issue an order to enter premises, &c., to a constable or officer of the local authority. Such an order would amount to a warrant. And by s. 74 those officers or a justice may order the substance seized to be destroyed or rendered harmless. But a sample must first be taken and a portion thereof given to the owner or person having control of the explosive at the time of seizure.

Remand.

Remand. A warrant of remand is granted to detain a person charged in custody pending the further hearing of the case (y); and, in certain cases, the order may be verbal (z).

Metropoli- As regards the Metropolis, it is laid down that the Commis-tan. sioner (a) may issue an order in writing authorizing a superintendent to enter any house, office, room, or place within the metropolitan police district kept or used as a betting-house or office contrary to the Act, with such constables as shall be directed by the Commissioner to accompany him, and, if necessary, to use force for the purpose of effecting such entry either by breaking open doors or otherwise. Having entered he may arrest all persons found therein, and seize all lists, cards, or other documents relating to racing or betting there found (b).

Betting. With regard to what is such a house, office, room, or place, it has been held, and may now be taken as settled, that any kind of inclosure, whether covered or not, with or without an erection, may come within the Act (c). But a table in Hyde Park (d), or a club where members bet with one another is not (e). The owner is not liable if he take no part (f), nor is a person betting in an inclosure if he do not remain in a fixed place (g).

What is house, room, office, or place. A similar power is conferred on the Commissioner in the case of a common gaming-house, and inasmuch as a betting-house is within the Gaming House Act, the entry into a betting-house is usually effected by an order under this Act (h).

The case of Jenks v. Turpin (i) contains a résumé of the statute and common law relating to gaming; and from the judgments of Hawkins and Smith, J.J., there can be little doubt as to what is a common gaming-house. Jenks v. Turpin.

A common gaming-house is "a house in which a large number of persons are invited habitually to congregate for the purpose of gaming (j). Definition.

"In default of other evidence, it shall be sufficient to prove : Evidence in support.
(1) that such house or place is kept or used for playing therein at any unlawful game, and that a bank is kept there by one or more of the players exclusively of the others; or (2), that the chances of any game played therein are not alike favourable to all the players, including among the players the banker or other person by whom the game is managed, or against whom the other players stake, play, or bet" (k).

It is immaterial whether the bank is kept by the owner, occupier, or keeper of the house, or by one of the players.

A house is not less a common gaming-house because gaming therein is restricted to the members of a club who resort thereto. Club.
"To no gaming-house is the public at large invited to go without restriction of some sort or other . . . If the admission of 500 persons does not make it a common gaming-house, it might equally be said that the admission of 5000 would not. The law does not require that it shall be a public gaming-house: a common gaming-house is that which is forbidden" (l).

If the house be not exclusively devoted to gaming, that will not prevent it from coming under the description if such be the fact. House not entirely devoted to gaming.

The following games are unlawful at the present day: Ace of hearts, pharaoh (or faro), baccarat, basset, hazard, passage, roulette, every game of dice except backgammon, and every game of cards which is not a game of mere skill, and any other game of mere chance. Unlawful games.

Court, or justice's warrant under sects. 204 and 205 of the same Act (n).

The writ of assistance apparently confers no further power than the justice's warrant (o); and in an action of trespass thereunder, entry can only be justified by the event (p).

Sea fisheries. The warrant of justices under the Sea Fisheries Act, 1888, to enter suspected places is executed by these officers (q).

The question in these cases is whether the facts with regard to the ship as she lays in port which would have been apparent to a person of ordinary skill on examining her and inquiring about her would have given him reasonable and probable cause to suspect her safety (u).

The procedure as to distillers is the same, except that permits for removal are, on application, to be granted as if the distress had not been made (x). Distiller.

EXPLOSIVES INSPECTORS.

Any of the following officers—namely, any Government inspector under this Act, any chief officer of police, and any superior officer appointed for the purposes of this Act . . . may for the purpose of ascertaining whether the provisions of this Act with respect to the conveyance, loading, unloading, and importation of an explosive are complied with (y), enter, inspect and examine at any time, and as well on Sundays as on other days, the wharf, carriage, ship, or boat of any carrier or other person who conveys goods for hire, or of the occupier of any factory magazine on shore, or of the importer of any explosive on or in which wharf, carriage, ship, or boat he has reasonable cause to suppose an explosive to be for the purpose of or in course of conveyance, but so as not to unnecessarily obstruct the work or business of any such carrier, person, occupier, or importer. Explosives inspectors.
Entry on wharfs, &c.

Any such officer if he find any offence being committed under this Act in any such wharf, carriage, ship, or boat, or on any public wharf, may seize and detain or remove the said carriage, ship, or boat, or the explosive, in such manner and with such precautions as appear to him to be necessary to remove any danger to the public, and may seize and detain the said explosive as if it were liable to forfeiture. Seizure and detention.

Any officer above-mentioned in this section, and any officer of police, or officer of the local authority who has reasonable cause to suppose that any offence against this Act is being committed in respect of any carriage (not being on a railway), or any boat conveying, loading, or unloading any explosives, and that the case is one of emergency, and that the delay in obtaining a warrant will be likely to endanger life, may stop and enter, inspect

The following are verbal orders:—

In the case of persons disturbing a petty sessional Court, the justices have power at common law to order their removal (s). A like power is conferred on revising barristers when sitting (t).

A coroner may order the forcible exclusion of a party from the Court (u), and so may a justice on a preliminary inquiry, even though he be the attorney of the party accused (v); but if the inquiry be final and of a judicial nature all persons have a right to be present (w).

As to witnesses it seems that they may be requested to leave the Court during the hearing; but that if they do not choose to obey, their evidence cannot be rejected on that account (x).

Out of sessions justices may verbally commit offenders in cases of breach or apprehended breach of the peace (y).

And where an unlawful assembly or rout exists, order its dispersal (z).

A returning officer at an election may order a person who misconducts himself at a polling station to be removed by a constable (a); or, if such person commit any offence there, to be arrested (b).

With regard to local authorities generally, there would appear to be no power at common law to sit with closed doors (c). But this would apparently not apply to meetings of committees.

C.—OTHER ORDERS.

C. Other orders.
Principal and agent.

The orders which remain to be considered are (a) those which constitute the officer executing them the agent simply of the person or authority making them. In some cases this agency is express, in others it is to be implied from the circumstances, but the principle applicable to both is the same.

No question arises here as to whether the king is, or is not, a party. The powers conferred are of a lower order than those of warrants and orders which have been above discussed, and are, generally speaking, those of local and departmental authorities, made for local purposes and applied locally.

LOCAL ACTS.

Local Acts. Local Acts confer upon local authorities, sometimes called commissioners, powers to do certain things, and officers are directed to be appointed in pursuance of the Acts for the purpose of carrying the provisions of the statutes into execution.

Such officers are, while acting within the scope of the powers delegated to them, the agents of the body entrusted with the execution of the Act (b).

A power, in such an Act to seize wares, merchandize, &c., placed on footways or carriageways, and not removed when required by the authority, may be exercised without any previous proceedings before justices (c).

Under the denomination of bye-laws are to be included the regulations which are made for the management of the revenue, or of the Post Office, to regulate traffic in the Metropolis, and in towns, by the Home Secretary in regard to the management of gaols, and the execution of the Acts relating to burial-grounds, and those of local authorities, made either for general purposes or under the Acts for the regulation of piers, harbours, and docks.

The power to make such regulations is to be found in the

(a) Summonses issued by Courts or justices are not within the purview of the work. They are purely "administrative," as distinguished from "executive."

(b) See post, p. 148. As to the imposition of a penalty under such an Act, see Triggs v. Lester, 30 J. P. 228.

statutes which confer the general powers on the different authorities, and if in making the bye-law, the power conferred, or the general law of the land is exceeded, it is void (d).

A bye-law is a law made by some authority less than the sovereign or Parliament, in respect of a matter specially or impliedly referred to that authority, and not provided for by the general law of the land (e). Definition.

The necessary ingredients of its validity are:—

| 1. Consistent with and not repugnant to the general law 2. Certain, i.e. not ambiguous, and affording complete direction to those who are to obey it, and have definite penalties for its breach, which must not be excessive (f). There may be power to mitigate the penalty (g). 3. General in its application, i.e. obligatory on all persons equally. 4. Reasonable (h). In determining whether or no a bye-law is reasonable, it is material to consider the relation of its framers to the locality affected by it and the authority by whom it is sanctioned (i). | Necessary ingredients. 1. Where a council made a bye-law under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 23, that no person not being a member of Her Majesty's army or auxiliary forces, acting under the orders of his commanding officer, should sound or play upon any musical instrument in any of the streets of the borough on Sunday, it was held unreasonable (j). And so also, was one where a penalty was imposed on every person who in any street shall sound or play upon any musical or noisy instrument, or shall sing, recite, or preach in any street without having previously obtained a licence in writing from the mayor (k). And so was one made under the Public Health Act, that "no person shall commence the erection of a building in a new street unless and until the kerb of each footpath therein shall have been put on such a level as may be fixed and approved by the urban sanitary authority" (l). And one prohibiting the keeping of swine within fifty feet of a dwelling-house (m), or requiring a new fee for the commencement of each new period of granting licences (n), or notice as to the erection of temporary

5. Not ultrá vires, i.e. within the scope of the authority delegated in the particular case (q).

The Secretary of State is liable in trespass if a person be removed from one part of a prison to another in which he is not legally confined, under a general order made by him for the classification of prisoners which he had no legal authority to make (r).

A bye-law respecting non-compliance with the requirements of a board is probably ultrá vires (s). And so also is one giving power to such board to pull down buildings erected contrary to the bye-laws (t).

Where undertakers, under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 27, s. 33, provided that no lumpers should be allowed to work on board any vessel in the dock but such as were authorized by the company, unless permission in writing had been previously obtained from the superintendent of the dock, and that servants of the company only should be allowed to work within the dock premises, whether on ship, lighter, or shore, they were held ultrá vires (u). And the same was held where it was laid down that no person should purchase, barter for, or deal in marine stores or other second-hand goods in or about the dock or premises without first obtaining permission in writing from the company (v). And also as to one made by a municipal corporation that parents should be liable to a penalty if they suffered a child to be selling articles in the street after a certain hour (w). And one made by a local board that a person should not cause or suffer any fowl to enter and remain in pleasure-grounds (x).

Where power was conferred on conservators to make bye-laws to regulate the use of nets, and a bye-law was made thereunder prohibiting during a certain season the use of any net except a trawl, it was held ultrá vires (y).

A bye-law may be good in part and bad in part, if the two parts be distinct (z). There is no dispensing power in the makers thereof (a). But now, where an Act confers a power to make any rules, regulations, or bye-laws, the power shall, unless the contrary intention appears, be construed as including a power exercisable in a like manner, and subject to like consent and conditions, if any, to rescind, revoke, amend or vary such rules, regulations and bye-laws (b).

Confirmation by a superior authority does not render a bad bye-law valid. Where the Lord Chancellor was reported to have confirmed a bye-law it was said, "it is never the better for that, for that is done of course. If the orders be not good, let the parties look to that at their peril" (c).

Confirmation.

ADULTERATION.

Any medical officer of health, inspector of nuisances or inspector of weights and measures, or any inspector of a market, or any police constable . . . may procure any sample of food or drugs (d).

Adulteration.

Samples.

The officer purchasing shall, after the purchase, forthwith (e) notify to the seller or his agent his intention to have the same analysed by the public analyst (f), and shall offer to divide the article into three parts to be then and there separated, and each part to be marked and sealed or fastened up in such manner as its nature will permit, and shall, if required to do so, proceed accordingly, and shall deliver one of the parts to the seller or his agent (g).

Notification of analysis.

Division of samples.

To constitute an offence against sect. 6 of the Act, which prohibits the sale not of the nature, substance, and quality demanded, a false representation of the "nature, substance, and quality" must be made at the time of the sale (h).

Offence, what.

But under sect. 9, which prevents the sale of a deteriorated article without notice, knowledge that it is deteriorated is immaterial (i). Under this section there may be, in the case of milk delivery in cans, an offence as to each can (j).

These officers may, without going through the form of purchase provided by the principal Act, but otherwise acting in all respects in accordance with the provisions of the said Act as to

No notification to the seller as above-mentioned is necessary in the case of milk samples (o).

CANAL-BOATS.

Canal
Inspection.

Where any person duly authorized by a registration or sanitary authority (or by a justice of the peace) has reasonable cause to suppose either that there is any contravention of this Act (p) on board a canal-boat or any person suffering from an infectious disorder, he may, on producing (if demanded) either a copy of his authorization or some other sufficient evidence, enter by day such canal-boat and examine the same and every part thereof . . . and may if need be detain the boat for the purpose, but for no longer time than is necessary.

The master shall, if required by such person, produce to him the certificate of registry (if any) of the boat, and permit him to examine and copy the same, and shall furnish him with such assistance and means as such person may require for the purpose of his entry and examination of and departure from the boat in pursuance of this section (q).

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES.

Contagious

Entry.

Contagious diseases inspectors employed by the local authority have the same powers as constables have under the Act (r).

They may at any time on giving reasons in writing, if required, enter any land, dairy or cowshed to which the Act applies, or milk-shop, or stores, or other building or place where they have reasonable grounds to suppose: (a.) disease exists or has within fifty-six days existed; (b.) the carcase of a diseased or suspected animal is or has been kept, buried, destroyed, or

EXPLOSIVES.

Any officer authorized by the local authority may, on producing, if demanded, either a copy of his authority . . . or some other sufficient evidence, require the occupier of any store (not subject to the inspector of mines), or any registered premises, or any small firework factory, to shew him every or any place and all or any of the receptacles in which any explosive or ingredient of an explosive or regulated by this Act (u), that is in his possession is kept, and to give him samples of such explosive ingredient or substance, or of any substance which the officer believes to be an explosive, or such ingredient or substance (v).

He may also purchase any petroleum from any dealer in it, and on producing a copy of his appointment, or other sufficient authority, require such dealer to shew him every or any place, and all or any of the vessels in which any petroleum in his possession is kept, and give him samples of such petroleum on payment of the value thereof (w).

are those where they are authorized to interfere to some extent with the property of an individual. As to the general principle of law applicable in such cases, see ante (c).

The local authority may order the following things to be done, namely:—

Drains, &c. The carrying of sewers and water-mains through private lands, if, on the report of the surveyor, it is by him deemed necessary (d). “Necessary” means for the efficient discharge of the duty in the way most for the public benefit. The Court will not interfere with the bonâ fide determination of the surveyor (e).

They need not purchase the lands (f), but in case of a sewer it must not amount to a nuisance (g).

They may perhaps place ventilating shafts to drains against private buildings (h), enforce the drainage of undrained houses (i), enforce privy accommodation (j), and examine the same on complaint (k).

Drains cannot be disconnected by the local authority unless the connection has been made contrary to the Act (l).

Streets. They may sewer, level, pave, metal, flag, channel, make good, and light, after notice not attended to, and charge expense on the owner or occupier, fronting, adjoining or abutting streets, not being highways, repairable by the inhabitants (m). But an incumbent or minister of a church, &c., exempt from poor-rates is not so liable (n).

This exemption does not apply to trustees of a chapel and buildings not wholly devoted to religious purposes (o).

Houses and workshops. They may purify houses after certificate of the medical officer that they are unwholesome and refusal to purify on the part of the occupier (p).

Filth. And remove filth on the certificate of the inspector (q).

Infected persons. And remove infected persons (r) and destroy the bedding (s).

Gas and water. And remove gas and water-pipes where the owner refuses to

Also where a nuisance exists or an order of abatement or prohibition has been made, between the hours aforesaid until the nuisance is abated or the works completed, and such order of abatement or prohibition not having been complied with, they must be admitted in order to abate the same (o).

A nuisance is any premises in such a state as to be a nuisance, pools, ditches, &c., so kept, or animals, or accumulations or deposits, or houses overcrowded, factories, workshops, &c., not cleanly kept, or ventilated or overcrowded, or fireplaces and furnaces not consuming their own smoke, or chimneys sending forth quantities of black smoke (p).

Working classes, housing. Food.

Under the Public Health Amendment Act, if adopted (s), they may enter premises to see whether chemical refuse or steam be turned into sewers (t), or to sweep courts and passages, in which case the expense may be charged on the occupier (u). They may also, on the representation of four householders, inspect buildings unfit for habitation (v).

Any medical officer of health or inspector of nuisances may at all reasonable times (w) inspect and examine any animal (x), carcase, meat, poultry, game, flesh, fruit, fish, vegetables, corn, bread, flour, or milk exposed for sale or deposited in any place (y) for the purpose of sale or of preparation for sale (z), and intended for the food of man; . . . and if any such animal, &c., appears to be diseased, unsound, unwholesome, or unfit for food, he may seize (a) and carry away the same in order to have the same dealt with by a justice (b).

This power is extended to horse-flesh intended for sale for food, and exposed for sale in any place not advertised for the sale thereof (c). Horseflesh.

The medical officer has all the powers of entry and inspection of bakehouses as an inspector under the Factory Act (d). Bake-houses.

The local officer may remove persons offending against any bye-laws made under the Baths and Wash-houses Acts (e), and refuse admittance to any person who may have been convicted of an offence against the bye-laws or public decency (f). Baths and wash-houses.

The inspector of provisions may seize unwholesome meat or provisions in the market or fair, and carry the same before a justice (g), and may arrest an unknown offender (h). He may enter any building erected for slaughtering cattle, and seize and carry away such as appears unfit for food (i). Markets and fairs.

On refusal to pay toll (j) he may distrain all or any of the cattle or other articles in respect of which it is payable belonging to the person liable to pay (k).

He may also at all reasonable times weigh or measure all goods sold, offered, or exposed for sale (l).

Under the Public Health Amendment Act, when adopted, the local authority may close parks and pleasure-grounds for twelve days in the year, not more than four being consecutive (m). Parks.

The inspector of nuisances, officer of health, or any other officer appointed for that purpose, may at all reasonable times, with or without assistants, enter into and inspect buildings or places kept or used for the sale of butcher's meat or for slaughtering cattle, and examine whether any cattle, or the carcase of any such cattle, is deposited there, and, if it appear unfit for food, seize and carry the same before a justice (n). Work-shops.

The sanitary authority and their officers shall have all such powers, as to entry and inspection for the purposes of purification of workshops, as an inspector of factories has generally as regards factories (r).

Metropolis.

Nuisances.

The definition of nuisance in the Metropolitan Act is practically identical with that in the Public Health Act, with the additions of (1) absence from premises of water fittings, and (2) tents and vans kept so as to be a nuisance (s).

Manure, &c.

The sanitary authority may sell manure, &c., collected by them either by public auction or otherwise (t).

Their right of entry is to be subject in all cases to the production of a written document shewing such right (u).

Entry.

They may enter from time to time any premises (a) to examine any nuisance liable to be dealt with under the Act at any hour by day; or where nuisance arises from a business, when the business is carried on (b) where a nuisance is ascertained to exist, or order made, then at any such hour as aforesaid until abated or the works completed; (c) where order not complied with or infringed, then at all reasonable hours, including all hours in which business is in progress or usually carried on (v).

They may enter slaughter-houses or knackers' yards at any hour by day, or when business is in progress, to examine whether there is any contravention of the Act or bye-laws made thereunder (w); and trade-works or steam-vessels, to enforce the Act as to smoke consumption (x); and after notice not complied with, they may lime-wash, cleanse, or purify workshops and bakehouses (y).

The County Council have the like power of entry for the execution of orders and regulations as to dairies (z).

The sanitary authority must remove refuse free, and trade refuse on reasonable remuneration (a); and obnoxious matter may be removed by them on the requisition of the inspector, and taken possession of after notice not complied with (b).

They may also enter and execute works as to water-closets (c)

And examine water-closets; and for that purpose, or to ascertain the course of a drain, they may at all reasonable times by day, after twenty-four hours' notice on the occupier or owner, or in emergency without notice, enter and cause the ground to be opened, doing as little damage as possible. If in good order, the authority to pay the expenses, otherwise not (e). And where water-closets are improperly made or altered, after notice not complied with, enter and make necessary alterations (f).

They may cleanse and cover offensive ditches, damage to mills, &c., being made good (g). Ditches.

In case of certain infectious diseases, viz. small-pox, cholera, diphtheria, membranous croup, erysipelas, scarlatina, scarlet fever, typhus, typhoid, enteric, relapsing, continual or puerperal fever (h), they may order the destruction of unfit bedding or disinfect bedding, paying compensation for damage; and after notice not complied with, cleanse and disinfect infected premises, entering by day, temporary shelter to be provided for families (i). Infectious disease.

And in case of epidemics, they may enter any premises or vessel for the purpose of executing or superintending the execution of regulations (j).

Under order of a justice—

Of abatement, prohibition or closing not complied with, they may enter the premises and do what is necessary in execution thereof (k). In case of appeal, if immediate abatement required, if appeal be successful, the damage is to be made good (l). Justice's order.

They may close wells (m), and remove persons suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder to a hospital, where they are without proper lodging or accommodation, or lodged in a tent or van, or on board a vessel (n).

And cleanse underground dwellings (o).

And remove dead bodies to mortuaries (p).

The local authority may take down buildings beyond the general line (q).

Where this section was found inconsistent with a special Act, it was held the justice had no jurisdiction to make the order (r). And in any case a verbal order is insufficient (s).

Common

Fires.

As to officers of the authority, the power to inspect food is practically identical with that under the Public Health Act (t).

And the power as to tents and vans is the same as in the previous Act (u).

They may enter underground rooms for inspection at any hour by day (v).

Any surveyor or inspector, or such other person as the vestry may appoint, may inspect any drain or other works within the parish or district of such vestry, and for that purpose at all reasonable times in the day time after twenty-four hours' notice to the occupier; or in case of emergency, without such notice, may enter upon any premises, and cause the ground to be opened in any place they think fit, doing as little damage as possible (w).

Common lodging-houses are open to inspection at all times (x). But such a house, maintained as a charitable institution, is not within the Act (y).

In case of fire, the officer in charge of the fire brigade may remove persons who interfere with the operations, and take all measures expedient for the protection of life and property, with power to break into or through, or take possession of, or pull down, any premises to put an end to the fire, doing as little damage as possible, and to shut off mains in any district for a greater supply of water (z).

He need not take possession of premises (a).

The brigade must render assistance to the salvage corps, and hand over property saved to them (b).

PART II.

INHERENT POWERS.

As nearly all the inherent powers of officers are conferred by statute, it should be premised here that, where a power is conferred by statute, it must be pursued strictly, or it will afford no justification in the event of action arising on account of its exercise. This principle will be found laid down in the case of Warne v. Varley (a). There searchers of leather had been appointed under statute, who were authorized to seize leather insufficiently dried, in order to carry it before officers called triers. It was held that this authority did not extend to the seizure of any leather which was sufficiently dried, though in their judgment it was not so, and that such a seizure having taken place, they were liable to an action of trespass.

Inherent powers.

To be pursued strictly.

But, although this is the general principle, it must be read in conjunction with those protective clauses of statutes which have been passed for the relief of officers when acting or neglecting to act bonâ fide, in the belief that they were discharging their duty, and which will be found discussed infra (b).

Qualification.

OFFICERS ATTENDING COURTS.

In the case of all officers attending Courts, it is obvious that, whether the Court be the High Court of Parliament or a petty sessions, the object of their attendance is to secure order and decorum during the sittings thereof. It is presumed, therefore, that it follows that they have in their own persons power to take such steps as may be reasonably necessary to secure the maintenance of such order and decorum without any specific instructions for that purpose; and that to this end they may remove any persons who make a disturbance, or prevent from entering those who are in an improper state (c).

Officers attending Courts.

To preserve decorum.

In cases involving charges of indecency, women have usually been denied admittance; but it seems they are entitled to be present if they think fit (d).

Cases of indecency.

The disturbing of a meeting of justices would appear to constitute a breach of the peace (e).

SHERIFF.

Sheriff. When a jury has been empanelled, they are strictly in the custody of the sheriff until their verdict be given (f). In practice, however, this rule is relaxed, except on the trial of persons for serious crimes.

Jury.

Where they are detained, a bailiff is sworn to keep them together, and not to suffer any to speak to them (g).

CONSTABLES.

Constables. The duty of constables is to preserve the peace, and where Duty. any serious offence against the law is committed, to seize and detain the offender.

Force, use of. If resisted in the execution of duty, they may repel force by force, provided it is proportioned to the injury it is intended to prevent (h).

Aiding other officers. Under a number of statutes these officers are required to lend their assistance to other officers, either to effectuate the execution of some warrant or some power which such other officer has in his own person. In such cases, it has been held, the constable is in the execution of his duty (i); but if he act purely ministerially, and is not guilty of any excess, he is not liable while so acting (j); and if protection be afforded to these other officers, he is usually entitled to share it (k).

Infants. Three classes of persons, viz. infants, lunatics, and married Lunatics. women, are under certain circumstances excused from the consequences of criminal acts; but this is a matter for the judge or Married women. magistrate, and would not generally affect the duty of a constable to act in such cases (l).

Arrest.

Arrest. The inherent power of a constable to arrest is confined to cases of treason, felony, or reasonable suspicion thereof, breach of the peace committed in his view, and those misdemeanours which are specially provided for by statute, and detailed below (m).

Time. With regard to the time of arrest, it appears that on a criminal charge it may take place at any time of the day or night (n); and in cases of treason, felony, and breach of the peace, on Sunday also (o).

As to breaking doors, it seems that that can take place only in two cases:—

1. In an affray which occurs in his view, he may pursue the affrayers, and if they fly to a house into which he is not permitted to enter, he may in the immediate pursuit break the doors to apprehend them (p). Or if there be an affray in a house, and the doors be shut, whereby there is likely to be manslaughter or bloodshed committed (q), provided the life of some person in the house is really in danger, and there be calls for assistance (r). Or if there be any disorderly drinking or noise at an unseasonable time of the night, especially in inns, a constable demanding entrance and being refused, may break open the doors to see and suppress the disorder (s).

Breaking doors.

In (1.) affray.

2. If a felony be committed, and there be reasonable ground of suspicion (t) that the felon was in the house (u), or if a felony will probably be committed unless he interfere, and there are no other means of entering (v), he may in immediate pursuit (w) break the door.

In (2.) felony.

In all other cases a warrant is apparently necessary (x).

A constable cannot justify handcuffing a prisoner unless he has attempted to escape, or it be necessary in order to prevent his doing so (y).

Handcuffs.

Where the circumstances are such that a man must know why a person is about to apprehend him, he need not be told, and the arrest will be legal, and resistance illegal, as if he had been told (z).

Stating cause of arrest.

The jurisdiction of justices to hear and determine is limited to six months from the commission of the offence (a); and time runs as soon as the defendant's default or liability is complete (b). In indictable offences there is no such limitation.

Jurisdiction.

A constable has no authority at common law to act out of his vill (c). But a police authority may now enter into an agreement with another authority to aid such other authority either generally or for any particular time. And under such an agreement the constables of the aiding force are deemed to have all powers and privileges of the aided force (d).

In felonies, and under the Coin, Gaming, Highway, Industrial Schools, Larceny, Night Offenders, and Vagrant Acts (e), any person may arrest, which words include, of course, a constable out of his jurisdiction. In such case he would not be acting in execution of his duty, and could not therefore claim the privileges accorded to a constable when so acting.

Authority to arrest is confined to the following cases:—

Affray.

Where there is an affray, i.e. the fighting of two or more persons in some public place to the terror of Her Majesty's subjects (f). No quarrelsome or threatening words, are sufficient (g); but there need be no actual violence; as where persons arm themselves with dangerous and unusual weapons (h). Here the constable may arrest and carry the affrayers before a justice, or detain them till their heat be over. But it is essential that the party should have been engaged in the affray, and that the constable should have had view of the affray while the party was so engaged in it, and that the affray was still continuing at the time of apprehension (i). If they fly into a house he may in the immediate pursuit break in to apprehend them (j).

To justify an arrest for an assault and battery in a constable's view, it must be such as would justify a criminal charge (k).

Where a man in the presence of a constable raised a shovel as if to strike his wife, swearing that he would have murdered her were it not for the presence of the constable, and afterwards for about twenty minutes continued to use violent language towards his wife, and then left his house professing an intention of going to his father's to sleep; and after he had gone a few yards the constable arrested him, he was held justified in doing so (l). But where upon an assault on a constable in the execution of his duty, a delay of over an hour occurred, when the house of the prisoner was forced and he was arrested therein, the arrest was held illegal (m). And so also is one on the charge of another constable which is not well founded (n).

A prize-fight is an assault, and this has been held to be such a fighting, whether with gloves or not, that injury to one of the combatants is likely to ensue (o) ; all persons aiding and abetting therein are guilty of assault, but the mere presence of a person is not conclusive of aiding or abetting (p).

A battery includes beating and wounding. To beat means not merely to strike forcibly with the hand, or a stick, or the like, but includes every touching or laying hold (however trifling) of another's person or clothes in an angry, revengeful, rude, insolent, or hostile manner (q)., as e.g. thrusting or pushing him in anger (r), holding him by the arm (s), spitting in his face, jostling him out of the way (t), pushing another against him (u), throwing a squib at him (v), striking a horse on which he is riding by which he is thrown (w). If one strike at another and miss him it is an assault only. A wounding is where the violence is so great as to draw blood (x).

No battery can occur by mere misadventure (y), nor where a parent moderately corrects his child (z), or a master his servant or scholar (a), or if the defendant committed it merely in his own defence (b), or in defence of a husband, wife, child, parent, master, or servant (c).

Any meeting whatever of great numbers of people with such circumstances of terror as cannot but endanger the public peace and raise fears and jealousies among the King's subjects, seems properly to be called an unlawful assembly, as where great numbers, complaining of a common grievance, meet together armed in a warlike manner, in order to consult together concerning the most proper means for the recovery of their interests, for no man can foresee what may be the event of such an assembly (d).

Assembly unlawful.

Illegal drilling constitutes an unlawful assembly (e), and so also would it appear to be where parties assemble together to obstruct the officers of the law (f). Any assembling together in thoroughfares for the purpose of peaceably passing along is lawful. But there is apparently no common law right of stationary meeting in any thoroughfare or public place (g).

A lawful assembly may become unlawful if during its course seditious words are spoken of such a nature as to produce a breach of the peace (h).

Where persons assembled with others for a lawful purpose, and with no intention of carrying it out unlawfully, but with the knowledge that their assembly would be opposed, and with good reason to suppose that a breach of the peace would be committed by those who opposed it, they could not be convicted of an unlawful assembly (i).

The local authority responsible for the maintenance of order may, in their discretion, issue notices warning persons not to attend a meeting, but a meeting held there subsequently is not an unlawful assembly by reason only of the existence of such a notice (j). Any one who reads it however is aware of the character of the meeting and thus affected with responsibility for attending it (k).

An assembly being unlawful may be dispersed (l).

Brawling.

Any person making any disturbance in any church, chapel, or churchyard may be immediately apprehended by any constable and taken before a justice (m). The disturbance must be wilful and intentional (n).

Breach of the peace.

As was above stated, the constable may arrest for a breach of the peace committed in his view. But it must be actual (o), and he may arrest as soon after as he conveniently can, so as it come within the expression "recently" (p). The continued ringing at a door-bell without cause or excuse is not itself such a breach, but it is eminently calculated to lead to it, and if it is done and persisted in, in view of the constable, he may arrest (q).

The disturbance and annoyance of a public meeting by putting questions to the speakers, making observations on their statements, and saying "that is a lie," is not a breach of the peace (r). Nor is using loud words in the street (s), and arrest in such case is unjustifiable (t). But if a constable be engaged in preventing a breach of the peace, and a person stands in his way to hinder his doing so, he may arrest such person (u).

Child exposure.

A person about to expose an infant whereby its life may be endangered may be arrested (v).

A convicted person, at large on licence, who a constable may reasonably suspect (w) of having committed any offence or broken any of the conditions of such licence (x) may be apprehended. And so also may persons twice convicted if they are found getting their living by dishonest means, or found under suspicious circumstances, or found on premises without being able to give a satisfactory account of themselves (y). Convicted persons.

A constable may on his own view arrest offenders against the Cruelty to Animals Act. The offences are—cruelly beat, ill-treat, over-drive, abuse, or torture, or cause this to be done, to any animal (z). Animal means horse, mare, gelding, bull, ox, cow, heifer, steer, calf, mule, ass, sheep, lamb, hog, pig, sow, goat, dog, cat, or any other domestic animal (a), whether a quadruped or not (b). Cruelty to animals.

Cutting cocks' combs for fighting or winning prizes is within the section (c), and so is dishorning (d). But operating for the purpose of improving an animal is not (e). Nor is mere passive cruelty by not killing a wounded animal (f), unless there be evidence of its being kept in such a manner as to amount to torturing (g).

Keeping, or using, or acting in the management of any place for the purpose of fighting or baiting any animal (h), or aiding thereat.

This offence must be committed in a place usually kept for the purpose (i). Hunting rabbits in an inclosed area of four acres is not within the section (j).

Persons impounding animals not providing food and water (k).

This does not apply to the pound-keeper (l).

Neck hair to be cut before slaughter, to be killed within three days, and food and water meanwhile provided (n).

Cattle for slaughter not to be employed (o).

Description of cattle slaughtered to be entered in book (p).

Conveying so as to cause unnecessary suffering (q).

Cruelty to children.

Persons committing offences against the Cruelty to Children Act may be arrested if the offence be committed in the constable's view, and the person's name and address cannot be ascertained, and the child may be taken to a place of safety (r).

The offences are—ill-treatment and neglect (s); causing child to beg (t).

Dice.

Persons playing with false dice may be arrested (u).

Drunkenness.

So also may every person who in any highway or other public place, whether a building or not, is guilty while drunk of riotous or disorderly behaviour, or who is drunk while in charge on any highway or other public place of any carriage, horse, cattle, or steam-engine, or who is drunk while in possession of any loaded fire-arms (v).

Escape.

Offenders who have escaped cannot be retaken without warrant, unless the original offence was one for which no warrant was required (w).

Explosives.

Constables may remove persons who enter factories, magazines, or stores of explosives without permission (x).

Felony.

With respect to felonies, inasmuch as they form a class to themselves, it is as well that they should be arranged alphabetically under this head.

A constable has power to arrest in case of felony committed, or reasonable suspicion that it has been committed (y); or, as regards offences against the person, that it is about to be committed in the night-time (z). Similar provisions are contained in the Larceny and Malicious Injury to Property Acts.

Accessories before and after the fact are now liable in all respects as principals (a).

With regard to what is reasonable suspicion, the grounds must be such as would lead a reasonable person acting without passion or prejudice to come to that conclusion (b).

Abduction.

Abduction of a woman for lucre or under twenty-one (c).

Of any woman by force (f).

Of a girl under fourteen (g).

Abortion, attempt to procure (h).

Abortion.

The administration of a drug must be by the defendant (i), but mere delivery is not sufficient (j), although the defendant need not be present at the time of taking the drug (k). The drug must be a poison or noxious thing (l), and the offence is complete whether the woman be or be not with child, and may be committed by the woman herself (m).

be a breaking, but it is not a breaking to open a window or aperture which is already open and should be fastened (c); but an entry by a chimney is a breaking (d). It may be on one night and the entry on another (e). It must take place in a dwelling-house, which includes every permanent building. The residence of care-takers is not sufficient (f), nor where the owner or occupier is not yet in actual occupation (g); out-houses must be connected with a covered way. There must be an entry (h) though with any part of the body or an instrument is sufficient (i).

Burglary by breaking out (j).

This extends to the case of larceny by lodgers (k). On an attempt it is unnecessary to establish entry (l).

Cattle, killing or maiming (m), &c.

Cattle.

Maiming without wounding must entail permanent injury (n).

The wounding need not be done with an instrument (o), and it is sufficient if it be done recklessly (p).

- Deer. Deer stealing (c).
- Desertion. Desertion army (d), or navy (e).
As to naval officers, it has been laid down that to be deserters they must be borne on the books of a ship in commission (f).
- Embezzlement. Embezzlement (g).
This offence is similar to larceny (h).
- Escape. Escape or aiding, in case of felony (i).
- Explosion. Explosion with intent, or attempts (j), or making, or having possession of explosive substances under suspicious circumstances (k).
- Extradition. As to extradition cases, it seems an open question whether a constable would be justified in arresting a fugitive on reasonable suspicion that he had committed a crime which would be felony if committed here (l).
- Foreign gold. Foreign gold or silver, counterfeiting or dealing in (m).
Forgery (n).
- Forgery. At common law this is the fraudulent making or alteration of a writing to the prejudice of another man's right (o). The slightest alteration of a genuine instrument in a material part whereby a new operation is given to it is sufficient (p). The name forged may be that of a fictitious person (q), provided the name be assumed for the purposes of fraud (r). It must be of some document or writing, and does not include painting an artist's name on a picture (s). It must be uttered, offered or disposed of, although that to an innocent agent or accomplice is sufficient (t).
Of Great Seal, powers of attorney, dividend warrants, &c. (u).
Of bank-notes (v).
Of deeds, bonds, &c. (w).
This includes a fraudulent demise (x), a guarantee (y), and post-office orders (z), but not letters of ordination (a).
Of wills (b).
Of bills of exchange and promissory notes (c).

This does not extend to forging an acceptance where the bill had not been signed by the drawer (d).

Of orders and receipts for money (e).

It is sufficient if the party to whom it is addressed has been in the habit of treating similar documents as orders (f). A guarantee (g), a dividend warrant (h), and a pawnbroker's duplicate (i), are within the section. But not a request to pay money (j), nor a certificate that a person is gaining his livelihood by certain means (k). It must be made by a person who might command the payment to a person who was compellable to obey it (l), and it must purport to be directed to the person having possession of the money (m).

Of marriage licence (n).

It matters not that the marriage is void (o).

Of registers (p).

Gold coin impairing, colouring to represent, counterfeiting or dealing in, having three or more pieces after previous conviction (q). Gold coin.

Goods in manufacture, malicious injury to (r). Goods.

Grievous bodily harm, with intent to maim, resist apprehension, or by explosion (s). Grievous harm.

This applies to firing recklessly at a group (t); but not to a man who has communicated a venereal disease to his wife (u).

Hopbinds destroying (v).

Larceny.

At common law this is the wrongful or fraudulent taking or carrying away the personal goods of another from any place with a felonious intent to convert them to the taker's own use, and make them permanently his own property without the consent of the owner (y). Wherever there is a bonâ fide claim of right, however groundless, it is no felony (z), and the intention to steal is of the essence of the act (a). There must be a taking either actual or constructive (b). As to goods lost, if the finder appropriate them believing that the owner can be found, it is larceny (c); but not on a subsequent appropriation with such knowledge (d). Where the owner of his own free will parts with the property there is no larceny, however fraudulent were the means employed (e); but this does not apply to a trick or artifice (f). There must be a carrying away; but a bare removal is sufficient (g).

Of horses, cows, sheep, &c. (h).

Of oysters in fishery (i).

Of bonds, bills, notes, &c. (j).

Of wills and codicils (k).

Of records or other legal documents (l).

Of fixtures by tenants (h).

Machines, malicious injury to (i).

Machines.

The destruction of any part whether it works or not (j), is within the section (k); but if a part be destroyed through fear the remaining parts are not so (l). It extends to ploughs and water-wheels (m), and the damage need not be permanent (n).

Manslaughter (o).

Man-slaughter.

This is (1) involuntary—where a man doing an unlawful act not amounting to felony by accident kills another, or where by culpable neglect of duty he is the cause of the death of another, or, (2) voluntary—where in a sudden quarrel two persons fight, and one of them kills the other, or where a man greatly provokes another by some personal violence and the other immediately kills him (p).

Mines, malicious injury (q).

Mines.

If a workman stop up an airway by order of the master it is no felony unless they knew the act to be malicious (r). If the act be done under a bonâ fide claim of right it is not within the section (s).

It may be committed with animals, and this includes a domestic fowl (h).

Vessels, injuring by explosion or otherwise (i).

Wreck, impeding escape from, or interfering with (j).

There are a number of statutes which authorize constables to arrest offenders provided they are "found committing" any offence against those Acts by such constable. These, therefore, like felonies, form a class, which will be conveniently arranged in alphabetical order.

With regard to what is the meaning of this term, it appears that the words "found committing" must be construed strictly (k). An arrest cannot take place a little time afterwards (l), much less after an interval of two or three hours (m). But an offence may be being committed at a place other than that of its inception, as in the case of a thief still in possession of property recently stolen. In such case he is found committing (n).

Entry.

Entry. Constables are authorized to enter on lands (other than a dwelling-house or the curtilage thereof) if about to demand the production of a licence from a person carrying a gun (i).
Lands.

Licensing. They may also enter any house, room, or place where any public table or board is kept for playing at billiards, bagatelle, or any game of the like kind, whenever they think proper (j). And to detect the violation of the provisions of the Licensing Acts, which it is their duty to enforce, enter any licensed premises or any premises in respect of which an occasional licence is in force (k).

This section applies only to places licensed by justices (l), but the constable may enter, although no one is inside, nor has he reason to think there is (m).

Slaughter-houses. As to slaughter-houses, they may, either alone or accompanied by any inspector appointed under 26 Geo. 3, c. 71, at all reasonable times in the day-time, enter and view the same, and take an account of all horses or cattle found thereon (n).

Smuggling. They may enter on lands to prevent any signal being made to smugglers (o).

Threshing-machines. And on premises where they have reason to believe a threshing-machine is worked contrary to the Act (p).

Trespassers. They may not of their own motion turn trespassers off land (q).

inspect the conduct of any constable there stationed, or of the persons employed to load or unload, and to take such measures as may be necessary to prevent fire or accident and preserve the peace, and effectually prevent or detect all felonies and misdemeanours (u).

Search.

There is no statutory power to search a person on his arrest, and it is not certain that there is any such power at common law. In practice, however, a person apprehended for felony is searched, as well as the room or lodgings where he is taken, or happens to be living (v). The presumption is that in this latter case a warrant is necessary. Search.

Any constable may in any highway, street, or public place search any person whom he may have good cause to suspect of coming from any land where he shall have been unlawfully in search or pursuit of game (vv), or any person aiding or abetting such person, and having in his possession any game unlawfully obtained, or any gun, part of a gun, or nets or engines used for the killing or taking game (w). Game.

It is not necessary that any game should be found in the nets (x), but it should be seized on the highway (y) and found on the defendant's person (z), though this is not absolutely necessary (a).

Seizure and Detention.

Where a person is arrested for committing a felony or misdemeanour, any property in his possession believed to have been used by him for the purpose of committing the offence may be seized and detained as evidence in support of the charge; and, if necessary, such property may be taken from him by force, provided no unnecessary violence is used (b). Seizure and detention.

But if the seizure extend to property to which the power does not apply, it is no defence to say that in the judgment of the officer such power did apply (c).

Counterfeit coin and coining tools are seizable (d). Coin.

Under the Contagious Diseases Act the constable may stop, detain, and examine any animal, vehicle, boat, or thing to which an offence, or suspected offence relates, and require the same to Contagious diseases.

Cruelty to animals.

Where any person having charge of any vehicle or animal is arrested for an offence against the Cruelty to Animals Act, the constable may take charge of such vehicle or animal and deposit the same in some place of safe custody (f).

Customs.

If any goods liable to duties of Customs, or prohibited to be imported or restricted, are stopped on suspicion of felony, they may be taken to the same station as the offender (g).

Dogs.

Dogs reasonably supposed to be savage straying may be detained until expenses paid (h).

Excise.

A similar power to that above stated under Customs is extended to goods seized under the Excise laws (i), but forfeited goods are to be taken to the Excise Office.

Explosives.

Any Government inspector, constable, or officer of the local authority having reasonable cause to believe that any explosive, or ingredient of an explosive, or substance found by him is liable to be forfeited, may seize and detain the same until a Court of summary jurisdiction has determined the question of forfeiture. In such case the officer seizing may either require the occupier of the place in which it was seized (whether a building or not, or a carriage, boat, or ship) to detain the same in such place, or in any place under the control of such occupier, or may remove it in such manner and to such place as will, in his opinion, least endanger the public safety, and there detain it.

The receptacles containing the same may be seized, and detained, and removed in like manner as the contents thereof.

The officers seizing the same may use for the purposes of the removal and detention thereof any ship, boat, or carriage in which the same was seized, and any tug, tender, engine, tackle, beasts, and accoutrements belonging to or drawing, or provided for drawing, such ship, boat, or carriage, and shall pay to the owner a reasonable compensation for such use, to be determined, in case of dispute, by a Court of summary jurisdiction, and to be recovered in like manner as penalties under the Act.

The same shall, so far as practicable, be kept and conveyed in accordance with the Act and with all due precaution to prevent accidents (j).

Game.

Carts, &c., in or on which there shall be reason to suspect that game unlawfully obtained, or articles or things used for the purpose of taking the same are carried, may be stopped and searched, and if found therein, may be seized and detained (k).

If the game, gun, &c., is visible, a search of the person is not necessary to give jurisdiction to seize (l).

GAOLERS.

These officers have while acting the same powers, authorities, protection, and privileges as constables (h). Gaolers.

In prisons where debtors are confined, they are to be separated altogether from criminal prisoners (i). Debtors.

A debtor may maintain himself, provided he do not sell to other prisoners; and, if not maintained at the expense of the prison, is to receive the whole of his earnings. If furnished with implements, or so maintained, a deduction is to be made, to be determined by a justice (j).

Prisoners ordered by a judge to be treated as first-class misdemeanants are not criminal prisoners (k). First class misdemeanants.

As to criminal prisoners, no cell is to be used for the separate confinement of a prisoner unless certified to be fit by the inspector, and furnished with the means of enabling the prisoner to communicate at any time with an officer (l). Criminal prisoners.

The gaoler can only order confinement in a punishment-cell for twenty-four hours (m) and it is the same with irons and other mechanical restraints in cases of urgent necessity (n). Punishments can only be awarded by the gaoler or a justice (o).

Prisoners may be brought up for trial or removed (p), provided surgeon do not certify unfitness (q). Removal.

On admission they are to be searched, and all dangerous weapons, articles calculated to facilitate escape, and prohibited articles, to be taken from them (r); but no prisoner is to be searched in the presence of any other prisoner (s). Search.

Money and other effects brought into the prison by him, or sent for his use, which he is not allowed to retain, to be placed in custody of gaoler, who is to keep an inventory thereof (t). It appears to be recoverable at expiration of sentence (u). Money.

Prisoners may before trial maintain themselves, provided they do not sell to others (v). Maintenance.

A convicted criminal prisoner shall be provided with a complete prison dress, and shall be required to wear it (w). Sufficient bed-clothes to be provided, but convicted prisoners may be required to sleep on a plank bed during time determined by rules (x). Clothes.

CUSTOMS.

The inherent powers of customs officers are the following:— Customs.

Officers employed to prevent smuggling (a) may haul their vessels on the shore (not being a garden or pleasure-ground, or place ordinarily used for any bathing-machine (b)), or may patrol the coasts (not being a garden or pleasure ground) (c). Entry on lands.

Customs officers may board any ship arriving in port, and stay on board until all the goods laden therein are delivered therefrom, or until her departure, and shall have free access to every part thereof (d). So also may they, after clearance outwards, within the limits of the port, or within one league of the coast (e); and any ship carrying false colours in order to remove them (f). Boarding ships.

They may after boarding demand all documents which ought to be on board, and require them to be brought for inspection (g), and where the ship has cleared, the clearance (h). Demand documents.

The officers may search ships. or rummage all parts thereof, for uncustomed or prohibited goods (i); and those employed to prevent smuggling may search persons on board any ship or boat in port, or who shall have landed therefrom, if they have reason to suppose they are carrying uncustomed or prohibited goods (j). Such a person may require first to be taken before a justice or collector, or other superior customs officer, who may either discharge him or direct the search. And a female is to be searched only by a female (k). Search.

If the keys be withheld, the examining or superior officer may open any place, box, or chest (l). The officers may break packages for exportation, the contents of which are unknown (m), and examine all goods shipped or brought for shipment (n). Breaking packages and places.

They may also fasten down hatchways (o). Fasten hatchway.

All goods on board, and all goods lading or unlading, may be examined (p). And officers employed to prevent smuggling (q) Examination.

may on reasonable suspicion or probable cause stop and examine any cart or other conveyance to ascertain whether any smuggled goods are contained therein (r).

Samples.

They may take samples of margarine imported into or manufactured in the kingdom, if they have reason to believe that the provisions of the Act are infringed by conveyance under another title (s).

And also of tea imported; and if they find it mixed with other substances, or exhausted tea, shall not deliver it unless with the sanction of the Commissioners, and if it be unfit for food, it may be destroyed (t).

Seizure.

Where a power to seize is conferred by statute, it must be exercised strictly; and if the seizure extend to property to which the power does not apply, although in the judgment of the officer it did apply, it is no justification (u).

All officers employed in the prevention of smuggling may seize all ships, boats, goods, carriages, or other conveyances, and horses, animals, and things liable to forfeiture, and all persons liable to be detained, in any place on land or water (v). And for this purpose they may apparently go outside the usual limits of their jurisdiction (w). There can be no alienation so as to avoid forfeiture (x).

But no ship is to be liable to forfeiture unless under 250 tons (y). In such cases the Commissioners may fine, and require a sum not exceeding £500 to be deposited with the Collector. In default, the ship may be detained (z). The goods in such ship are still liable to forfeiture (a).

Ships unduly assuming British character, or concealing British or assuming foreign character, or owner acquiring ownership if unqualified, or making false declaration of ownership, are liable to seizure (b). And iron steamships not built according to rules may be detained (c).

If a foreign ship having had goods on board liable to seizure has unshipped at more than one league from the coast, she is liable to forfeiture, but only by coming within the distance during the same voyage (d).

Goods, &c., prohibited or restricted are:—

Arms, &c., proclaimed (e); beer (f); books, copyright, cards; cattle or hides proclaimed (g); chicory; chloral hydrate

The offences consist of—

Failing to export, import, or enter goods properly (o), or to report cargo (p), and smuggling (q).

The unshipping of goods, though in some cases not unlawful, may become so by reason of any subsequent fraud; but there must be a fraudulent removal to render the unshipment illegal (r).

Contraband goods may be seized in a river before they are landed or offered for sale (s).

Where masters refuse or neglect to give to officers declarations concerning aliens (other than seamen employed), and refuse to pay the penalty imposed, the ship may be detained (t). Aliens.

Proceedings for the recovery of penalties or for condemnation must be commenced within three years after the commission of the offence or seizure of the articles (u); but this does not apparently apply to indictments (v). Limitation.

A charge of 5s. a day may be made, and for removal of goods where that takes place, where a ship or goods importing remain more than fourteen days after arrival; and the like charge may be made on ships brought in under legal process or by stress of weather, or for safety or derelict, when actually guarded (w). The duties become a debt to the Crown immediately on the importation (y).

In case of dispute as to dues, the amount demanded must be paid, and an action commenced against the Collector within three months to ascertain what amount is payable (z).

Clearance. Where harbour dues remain unpaid, a clearance to the vessel may be withheld until security be given for their payment (a), and in any case if the master refuse to state her nationality (b).

Sale. Goods, in default of perfect entry, may be sold within one month after landing (c). If not entered within 14 days, they may be sold within three months (d); and those in warehouses, not cleared after five years, after one month's notice to the warehouse-keeper. Overplus, after payment of duties, to go to owner if known. If goods not worth the duty, they may be destroyed. In that case the duty is to be paid by the proprietor of the warehouse (e).

Arrest. As has been above stated, persons generally may be arrested for offences against the Customs Acts. So also may persons making signals to smugglers (f), and those found or discovered to have been on board vessels with contraband goods within three miles of the coast (except in the service of a foreign State) (g), and persons receiving forfeited goods or offenders, or assaulting or obstructing officers, or attempting to do so (h). The arrest may be effected at any place within three years of the commission of the offence (i).

Persons on board infected ships may be detained pending examination of the state of health of persons so on board (j).

Securing goods. Officers may secure goods before landing, and, if necessary, they may be placed in the Queen's warehouse (k).

Firing on ships. They may in pursuit of a ship or boat liable to seizure or examination (after signal) fire into her if she do not bring to (l).

Excise powers. Customs officers may exercise Excise powers when necessary (m).

Sea fisheries. Certain of these officers are employed to put into force the Convention to Regulate the Fisheries in the North Sea (n).

Methylator. They may in the daytime enter and inspect the premises of methylators, or retailers of methylated spirits, or of persons authorized to receive such spirits (x), and they may at any time enter the premises of a spirit dealer or retailer (y).

Retail spirit.

Tobacco. They may also at any time (but between 10 P.M. and 6 A.M. with the assistance of a constable) enter any workhouse or shop of a manufacturer, dealer, or retailer of tobacco or snuff and inspect and examine all tobacco and snuff therein (z).

Wine retailer. And during the hours in which any house licensed for the retail of wine to be consumed on the premises is kept open, may enter every house, cellar, room, or place entered for storing, keeping, or retailing wine (a).

Examination general. As regards places subject to the laws of excise they may inspect the same and take account of all matters, things, works, vessels, utensils, goods, and materials appertaining to such trade (b); and also of the brewing materials, vessels, and utensils used by brewers (c).

Brewery.

Distillery. In a distillery, they may test the quantity of spirits at proof in any wash by distillation, and require any charger or receiver to be emptied and cleansed and any quantity of the wash to be distilled, and the produce to be conveyed into the charger or receiver. The distiller must provide assistance and fuel (d); and the officer may examine, gauge, and take account of any still or other vessel or utensil, and the spirits or materials for their manufacture (e), and where a concealed pipe is discovered, examine whether it conveys liquor so as to prevent a true account being taken (f).

Methylator. A methylator's stock can only be examined in the daytime (g), but that of a spirit retailer at any time (h), or of a tobacco manufacturer, dealer, or retailer (i), but that of a wine retailer can only be examined while the house is open for the sale of liquor (j).

Spirit retailer. Spirits in transit may be examined (k).

Tobacco. As to samples, the officer may take such as he deems necessary of any worts, or beer, or materials for brewing, in possession of a brewer for sale, who may first stir up and mix together such worts, beer, or materials (l).

Wine.

Spirits in transit. In the case of margarine in transit, he may take samples to

Where a power to seize is conferred by statute it must be exercised strictly, and if the seizure extend to goods to which the power does not apply, although in the judgment of the officer it did apply, it is no justification (v). Seizure.

These officers, or any person acting in their aid, may seize any goods, commodities, and chattels, and any carts, horses, carriages, or other conveyances for carrying the same, forfeited by any act relating to excise (w). And mere possession seems sufficient without the intention to employ them illegally (x).

And stills, vessels, utensils, spirits, or materials for their manufacture, liable to forfeiture, may be seized (y), or spirits found on premises of a wine retailer (z). Spirits

Goods liable to duty are: Beer, cards, chicory, cider, coffee, patent medicines, perry, snuff, spirits, sweets, tobacco, and wine (a).

Persons discovered in unentered excise factories may be arrested and detained (b); and the officers here may do all that is necessary for the purpose of having the matter adjudicated on (c). Arrest.

The offences not previously mentioned are:—

Fraudulently removing goods liable to duty (l).

Making out false accounts and obstructing officers (m).

Limitation. Proceedings for the recovery of penalties must be commenced within three years (n). But this does not apparently apply to indictments (o).

Ladders and lights. Brewers and distillers must supply officers with ladders and lights to enable them to make their examination (p), and distillers may be required to draw off worm-tub (q).

Permits. Manufacturers of tobacco must shew permits when demanded (r); and so must persons removing spirits in quantities of more than one gallon (s).

The collector has priority over ordinary judgment debtors, and over the landlord for rent due (b). Where bankruptcy or liquidation supervene, however, the power of distraint vanishes (c). The collector's claim must here be proved in the ordinary way, but is entitled to preferential payment (d).

To authorize a levy a demand of the specific sum must have been made and payment refused (e).

Constables cannot be introduced unless there be reasonable ground to suppose that an assault will be committed or resistance to the distress made (f).

Goods of a third person found on the premises are apparently seizable (g).

A reasonable time must elapse between the demand and distraint in order to permit of complying with such demand or the distraint will be unlawful (h).

So also will it be if it is made for a sum which is not actually due (i).

The duties of the collector on seizure will be found stated ante (j).

These officers collect income and land tax and house duty.

POST OFFICERS.

The power of these officers is principally as to detention and opening of letters.

This may be done in the case of a letter returned for want of true direction, or if the person to whom it is directed be dead, or cannot be found, or shall have refused the same (k), or if it be suspected to contain contraband goods (l), or is sent contrary to regulations (m).

A post-master is unable to charge for delivery of letters, any more than the established rates (n).

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES INSPECTORS.

These officers, who are under the orders of the Board of Agriculture, have the same powers as inspectors have under the Act (p).

They may, on the representation of a local inspector that the Act or an order or local regulation has not been complied with, detain a vessel, a copy of the representation being delivered to the master (q).

BURIAL-GROUNDS INSPECTOR.

inspector.*

The duty of this officer is to inspect burial-grounds in order to ascertain whether the regulations (if any) made by the Secretary of State in respect thereto, have been complied with (r).

Inebriates.

This officer also inspects retreats for inebriates for the same purpose (s). In this case non-compliance with the regulations constitutes an offence against the Act (t).

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS INSPECTORS.

These officers visit registered places to secure compliance with the provisions of the Vivisection Act (u).

Except under special certificate, experiments must be performed with a view to the advancement by new discovery of physiological knowledge by a person holding a licence, but not as an illustration of lectures, nor for the purpose of attaining manual skill. The animal must be under the influence of a sufficiently powerful anæsthetic (which does not include urari or curare (v)), and if it be seriously injured, be killed before it recovers from the influence thereof.

EXPLOSIVES INSPECTORS.

inspectors.
Entry.*

These officers may for the purpose of making necessary examination and inquiry, enter, inspect, and examine any factory, magazine, or store of any explosive, and every part thereof, at all times by day and night, but so as not to unnecessarily impede or obstruct the work therein, and make inquiries as to the observance of the Act, and all measures and things relating to the safety of the public or of the persons employed therein.

And they may enter, inspect, and examine any premises registered under the Act, and every part thereof in which any

They may require the occupier of any such factory, magazine, store, or premises, or any person employed therein to give them samples of any explosive or ingredient or substance (w), paying therefor the market value thereof (x). Samples.

FACTORY INSPECTORS.

This officer may, on producing, if required, the certificate of his appointment, (1) enter, inspect, and examine at all reasonable times, by day and night, a factory and workshop, and every part thereof, when he has reasonable cause to believe that any person is employed therein, and by day any place which he has reasonable cause to believe is a factory or workshop; (2) take with him in either case a constable, if he has reasonable cause to apprehend serious obstruction; (3) require the production of documents kept in pursuance of the Act, and inspect, examine, and copy the same; (4) make necessary examination and inquiry as to whether this and the Public Health Acts, have been complied with; (5) enter any school in which he has reasonable cause to believe that children employed in a factory or workshop are educated; (6) examine any person in such factory, &c., or school as to matters under the Act, and require them to sign a declaration of the truth of their statements; (7) exercise other necessary powers (y). Factory inspectors.
Entry.

This power may be exercised whether or not the factory or workshop is used as a dwelling (z).

The powers are not to be exercised as to retail bakehouses unless there is reasonable cause to believe that a child, young person, or woman is employed therein (a). Bake-houses.

But they may be extended (by direction of the Secretary of State) to any place of public entertainment at which the employment of a child is for the time being licensed (b). Cruelty to children.

MINES INSPECTORS.

This officer may (1) make such examination and inquiry as is necessary to ascertain whether the provisions of this Act are complied with; (2) enter, inspect, and examine any mine and Mines inspectors.

MERCHANT SHIPPING INSPECTORS.

inspectors.*

Every officer of the Board of Trade, commanding officer of any commissioned ship on full pay, consular officer, registrar general of seamen, chief officer of customs, and shipping master may, where he has reason to suspect that the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act, or the laws relating to merchant seamen and navigation are not complied with, (1) require the owner, master, or any of the crew of a British ship to produce any official log-books or documents, or a list of persons on board; (2) muster the crew; or (3) require the master to answer questions concerning the ship, crew or documents (d).

inspectors.*

Inspectors of the Board of Trade appointed to report (a.) as to accidents to vessels; (b.) whether the Act is complied with; (c.) whether the hull or machinery of steamships are in good condition, may (1) go on board any ship and inspect the same or any of the machinery, boats, equipments, or articles on board thereof, not unnecessarily detaining her; (2) enter and inspect any premises necessary for the purpose of making his report; (3) and require the production of all books, papers, &c. (e).

Surveyors.

The surveyors may board any passenger steamship at all reasonable times and inspect the same and all machinery, &c., certificates, thereof, not unnecessarily detaining her, and, if necessary, require the ship to be taken into dock for examination (f).

Receivers.

On a ship being stranded or in distress the receiver may take command of all persons present and issue directions for the preservation of the ship, persons on board, and cargo (g). For these purposes he may summon assistance, require the master of a ship near to lend aid and demand the use of any wagon, cart, or horses near (h).

(c) 50 & 51 Vict. c. 58, s. 41. 35 & 36 Vict. c. 77, s. 17, is to the like effect, which Act refers to metaliferous mines. An inspector under this latter Act may exercise the powers under the former Act if directed to do so by the Secretary of State—50 & 51 Vict. c. 58, s. 39. The decision of the Secretary of State that either of these Acts applies to any particular mine is final—s. 71.

(g) 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, s. 441. He cannot interfere between master and crew unless requested by master to do so.

(h) Sect. 442.

He may cause persons plundering, creating obstruction or disorder to be apprehended, and force to be used for the suppression of such plundering, disorder or obstruction (i). Arrest.

In such cases the receiver and his assistants may, unless there is a public road equally convenient, enter and pass over adjoining lands and deposit cargo, &c., thereon. Any damage is recoverable as salvage (j). And in the absence of the receiver, or principal officer of customs or coastguard, officers of inland revenue, sheriff, justice, or commissioned officers, may act in that capacity (k). Entry.

Whenever any salvage is due under this Act the receiver shall, if due for services rendered to save ship, persons or cargo, detain the ship and cargo until payment or process of detention issues from competent Court; if due for saving of wreck, detain wreck in like manner. But on security being given he may release the same (l). Detention.

In such cases of detention, if parties liable to pay are aware of it, he may, if amount not disputed and payment not made in twenty days after becoming due, sell the same or a sufficient part thereof, and out of the proceeds pay the expenses and salvage and the surplus, if any, to the owners. In other cases there must be a judgment of a competent tribunal before sale (m). Sale.

A detaining officer is to have the same powers as an inspector of the Board of Trade (n). Detaining officer.

For the purposes of survey, he may go on board the ship and inspect the same, and every part thereof, and the machinery, equipments, and cargo, and may require the unloading or removal of any cargo, ballast, and tackle (o).

And any officer of the Board may seize and detain any ship liable to detention under the Foreign Enlistment Act (p).

Harbours, Docks, and Piers.

With regard to harbours, docks, and piers, the collector of rates may either alone or with any other persons enter any vessel within the limits of the harbour, &c., to ascertain the rates payable in respect of such vessel or the goods therein (q). Harbours, &c.
Rate collector.
Entry.

The master of every registered vessel must on demand produce the certificate of the registry to the collector (r). Where goods are to be unshipped, the master must in case of the whole cargo furnish the collector with a copy of the bill of lading, and in case of part of the cargo, with the best account in his power of the goods to be unshipped, and give twelve hours' notice of the time of unshipment (s); and before shipment an account Certificate.

Harbour constables have the same powers, protection, and privilege as constables (f).

Piers, &c., under provisional orders are subject to the Merchant Shipping Act (g), and any general Act passed relating to harbours and dues (h).

Piers under provisional orders.

RAILWAY INSPECTORS.

These officers may enter and inspect any railway, and all the stations, works, buildings, offices, stock, plant, and machinery belonging thereto (i).

Railway inspectors.

WATER BAILIFFS.

Any water bailiff may, acting within the limits of his district, on production of the instrument of his appointment (j), examine any weir, dam, fishing-weir, fishing-mill, fixed engine or obstruction on any artificial water-course connected with any salmon river; stop and search on any salmon river any boat, &c., used in fishing on which there is reason to suspect (k) contains salmon, and seize any fish, instruments of fishing, or other articles forfeited in pursuance of the Acts; and search and examine all nets, &c., and other instruments used in fishing or carrying fish by persons reasonably suspected of having fish illegally caught, and seize all fish and other articles forfeited (l).

Water bailiffs.

Examine weirs, &c.

Search boats.

Seize forfeited articles.

Lights, spears, &c., are forfeited (m) and roe as bait (n), nets of improper mesh (o), fixed engines in tidal waters (p), or not removed within thirty-six hours after commencement of close season (q), and nets used at the tail-race of a mill, or below a dam where no fish pass (r), or during close time (s), and fish caught by such means, and unseasonable fish (t).

(d) This includes piers, &c., constructed under provisional orders.

Nets, stationary by mechanical contrivance, are fixed engines (u), but not if merely stretched across river by corks (v).

Any one may destroy an illegal fixed engine (w), and in such case the person so destroying the engines is not liable to be proceeded against for damages (x).

As to unseasonable fish, it is necessary to secure a conviction that the taker should know them to be such (y). But to take fish unlawfully they must be alive (z).

Privileges
as constables.

While acting within their authority they are to have the same powers, privileges, and protection as constables (a).

offenders.

This officer and his assistants may arrest persons between the expiration of the first hour after sunset and the last hour before sunrise illegally taking or killing salmon, or found in or near a salmon river with intent (b), or persons putting noxious material into a river with intent to destroy fish (c).

Production of licence.

They may require any person found fishing for salmon to produce his licence (d).

A licence is required where a man uses any device by which salmon may be caught, and not only a device for the purpose of catching salmon (e).

Thames.

Thames.

On the river Thames any water bailiff may enter into any fishing-boat or other vessel employed, or about to be employed, in fishing, and therein search for fish unlawfully taken, and any unlawful or prohibited net or apparatus for taking or destroying fish, and may seize any such fish, apparatus, &c. (f).

The conservators are authorized to make bye-laws for the protection of fish (g).

ALKALI WORKS INSPECTORS.

Alkali
inspectors.

These officers may at all reasonable times by day and night, without notice, but so as not to interrupt the manufacture, enter and inspect any work to which the Act applies, and examine any process for the evolution, or condensation, or rendering harmless of noxious gas, and any place where alkaline waste is treated,

MINISTER.

Minister. With regard to the office of minister, it should be premised that the freehold of churches and churchyards is in the rector or vicar (a), and in consequence he is entitled to the possession of the keys, and a duplicate obtained by a churchwarden has been ordered to be given up (b). "The minister has, in the first instance, the right to the possession of the key, and the churchwardens have only the custody of the church under him. If the minister refuses access to the church on fitting occasions, he will be set right on application and complaint to higher authorities" (c).

The possession of the church is in the minister and churchwardens, and no person has a right to enter it when it is not open for divine service except with their permission and under their authority (d).

Bells. Subsidiary to this right is that of ringing the bells and playing the organ at, or before, or after divine service or otherwise. The consent of the incumbent is necessary in both cases (e).

Organ.

Burial. Every person is by the common law entitled to burial in the churchyard of the parish in which he died (f) without any fee, unless there be a custom to pay such fee (g). But where a district which has a burial-ground becomes a separate and distinct parish, there is no right of burial in the old parish (h).

The intervention of the High Court is confined to the enforcement of the common law right (i), and does not extend to the mode of burial (j) nor the spot at which it takes place (k).

Connected with this subject is that of monuments and inscriptions.

Monu-ments. In the case of monuments, whether they are affixed to the wall or merely placed there as coats of arms are, the consent of the vicar or rector is necessary (l). But if he remove them after being properly erected, "he is subject to an action to the heir and his heirs in the honour and memory of whose ancestor they were set up" (m). As to gravestones, no consent appears to be necessary for their erection (n).

With reference to inscriptions, "no person has a right to inscribe on a tombstone what his fancy may suggest, e.g. if such inscription should impugn the doctrine or discipline of the Church of England . . . the inscription would be struck out" (o). But the words "The Rev." before H. K., Wesleyan Minister, in an inscription, otherwise unobjectionable, was held not a sufficient justification for the incumbent refusing to allow the tombstone to be erected (p).

It seems doubtful whether there is any obligation on the minister to perform the ceremony of marriage (q).

Inscriptions.

Churchwardens.
Seats.

CHURCHWARDENS.

It is the duty of churchwardens to enforce proper and orderly behaviour during divine service (r), and for this purpose they may direct in what particular seats, whether free or otherwise, persons shall sit (s). There is apparently no such duty when no service is being held (ss).

Pews belong to the parish for the use of the inhabitants, and cannot be sold or let but by special Act of Parliament. The churchwardens must exercise a just discretion in the allotment of pews (t). A pew can only be appropriated to a house by faculty or prescription. If allotted to an inhabitant who ceases to be such, he cannot let it with and thus annex it to his house (u).

No power but the Legislature can deprive the inhabitants of a parish of their general right to be seated in the church (v); and an action for damages will lie against these officers who refuse admission to a parishioner (w). Neither can they dispossess any one of a sitting which he has enjoyed for a time, without giving notice of their intention and offering an opportunity for objection and explanation (x).

These officers may apprehend any person guilty of riotous, violent, or indecent behaviour in any church, chapel or churchyard during divine service or otherwise (y).

The disturbance must be wilful and intentional (z), but includes the case of a person persisting in going to one part of the church when directed to sit in another (a).

They may also arrest persons molesting any clergyman ministering or celebrating any sacrament or other divine rite or service (b).

This does not apply to the case of a clergyman collecting alms after the service is over (c).

They may pull off a man's hat irreverently worn (d). But before a person is assaulted he should be requested to retire (e).

OVERSEERS.

Overseers. Every overseer or relieving officer having knowledge that any person wandering at large within the parish is deemed to be a lunatic may apprehend such person and take him before a justice (f) or remove him to the workhouse (g).

If the circumstances are such as to justify their interference, and an action for false imprisonment be successfully brought against them they are not necessarily liable to pay the damages and costs awarded personally (h).

Paupers. These officers may search paupers on admission to the workhouse, and deliver any money found upon them to the guardians (i).

Workhouse Officers.

Workhouse officers. This power of search is extended to workhouse officers (j).
Lunatics. Alleged lunatics brought to the workhouse may be detained for three days (k), or on a proper certificate for fourteen days (l) or more (m).

They may receive chronic lunatics (n), and within fourteen days of an escape they, or asylum officers, may retake an escaped lunatic (o).

Paupers. Paupers offending against the poor laws are deemed idle and disorderly under the Vagrant Act (p). These officers may take such offenders before justices without warrant, and, if required to do so, from thence to gaol, and while so acting, are to have all the powers and privileges of constables (q).

Casuals cannot discharge themselves before 9 A.M. the second morning after admission, nor where admitted more than once in a month before the fourth morning, and during the interval they may be removed by these officers or a constable to the workhouse from the casual ward (r). Casuals.

HIGHWAY SURVEYORS.

A highway is any road dedicated expressly or impliedly to the public, and used, whether or not the necessary steps have been taken under the Highways Act of 1835, to make it repairable by the parish (s). But a mere occupation road is not a highway, although they may co-exist (t). Highway surveyors.

Justices may unite parishes into districts and appoint district surveyors, who are to have the same powers as highway surveyors (u), and the powers as to getting materials and preventing nuisances are extended to surveyors of county bridges and roads at the end thereof (v). Surveyors of districts and county bridges.

Highway surveyors and surveyors of county bridges are not responsible in damages to travellers who have sustained injury from the highway or bridge being out of repair (w). Liability for non-repair.

The surveyor may make a road through the grounds adjoining any ruinous or narrow part of the highway (not being the site or ground whereon any house stands, nor being a garden, lawn, yard, court, park, paddock, plantation, planted walk or avenue to any house or inclosed ground set apart for building ground, or as a nursery for trees) to be used as a highway while the old road is repairing or widening (x). Road through adjoining grounds.

Obstructions from snow or the falling of banks are to be removed by the surveyor within twenty-four hours after notice from a justice (y). Obstructions.

Where the ratepayers convey the material to repair it is to be at such times and places as the surveyor may direct (spring, seed-time and harvest excepted) (z). Ratepayers conveying material.

If the surveyor shall make pits for getting materials he shall forthwith cause the same to be sufficiently fenced off while the pit continues open, and within three days after opening where no materials found cause the same to be filled up and covered with the turf taken out of the same, and where materials are found, within fourteen days after sufficient materials are obtained, cause the same to be filled up, if so required by the Fencing holes.

Materials in heaps.

He must not allow materials in heaps to remain at night to the danger of passengers (b). But he is apparently not liable under this section, nor at common law if a road under repair be left without fence or light (c).

Damage to bridges,
&c.

He cannot dig for materials whereby any bridge, well, building, dam, highway, occupation road, ford, mines, tin works, or other works may be damaged (d).

Cleanse
course.

He may make, scour, cleanse and keep open all ditches, gutters, drains, or watercourses, and also make and lay such tracks, tunnels, plats or bridges as he shall deem necessary in and through any lands or grounds adjoining. The damage in such case payable to the owner to be settled by a justice (e).

Tender of satisfaction for damage done is not a condition precedent to entry (f).

Encroachments.

He may take away and remove any encroachment (g).

But the defendant must first be summoned (h).

This does not apply to buildings not actually on the highway (i), but it does apply to any erection which makes the highway less commodious (j).

Arrest of
offenders.

Any person witnessing the commission of an offence may seize and detain the offender if unknown (k).

The offences are:—

Carrying away materials belonging to surveyor (l).

Riding on footpaths by the side of roads (m), or leading animals, carriages, &c., upon them, or tethering animals thereon.

Obstructing footways.

This does not extend to a right to plough up (n), nor to a perambulator (o), but there can be no right to erect stalls for refreshments (p).

Destroying the surface.

This includes a footway over a field (q).

Damaging banks, causeways, direction posts, or milestones.

Playing games to annoyance of passengers (r).

Hawkers, or gypsies, pitching tents, or encamping. Making fires, or firing guns or fireworks within fifty feet of the centre of the road.

There must be here injury, interruption or damage to the passengers (s). A burning tar-barrel on Guy Fawkes' Day is not within the section (t).

Baiting bulls, laying timber, running filth, wilful obstructions.

Suffering underwood to grow (u), or rain-water to drop from the eaves (v) is not within the section, but no continuance will make an obstruction lawful (w). A roller is an obstruction (x), and so are small ditches (y), and a person collecting a crowd by addressing them (z).

Persons guilty of pound-breach (a).

Drivers causing damage to others, or quitting road, or driving carriage without owner's name, or not keeping left side, or interrupting free passage, or not having proper control, or driving furiously (b).

Where a carriage is liable to excise duty, the name is not necessary (c). A bicycle is a carriage (d), and furious driving is now punishable under the section (e).

District Surveyor (Metropolis).

LIABILITIES.

UNDER WARRANTS AND ORDERS OF SUPERIOR COURTS AT COMMON LAW.

The first point to consider in reference to the liability of officers when acting under warrants and orders of any kind which issue in a due and regular manner is this, that obviously the exercise of the power conferred may be either (1) accurate, or (2) inaccurate. Inaccuracy of performance again divides itself into two kinds, namely, that which occurs where the power has been exceeded, and that where the duty to be performed has to some extent at least been neglected. It is only in the case of accurate performance that protection is afforded to the officer by virtue of the warrant (a). As regards inaccuracy, where the power has been exceeded, it would expose the officer to proceedings either civil or criminal on account of the excess, and where there has been neglect of duty to the detriment of the public, an attachment, information, or action would be held to lie. But where there has been mere excess of authority by officers acting under warrant, the doctrine of trespass ab initio does not apply as in the case of an overcharge in the nature of extortion (b), nor does it in any event in the case of nonfeasance (c). On the other hand, where there is any grossness or culpability in the excess such doctrine is applicable. Where for instance a sheriff merely continued in possession longer than the time allowed by law, he was held a simple trespasser (d). But where he so continued after the return day of the writ, such excess was held to constitute him a trespasser ab initio (e). And the same was decided where under a writ of ca. sa. he had broken an outer door (f). And in this last-mentioned case Lord Abinger said: "Where a party by reason of any irregularity becomes a trespasser ab initio, he cannot justify at all."

Liabilities.
Under warrants and orders of Superior Courts at common law.
Performance may be (1) accurate or (2) inaccurate, which latter consists of either (a.) excess or (b.) neglect.

Trespass ab initio not applicable in cases of (1) mere excess or (2) nonfeasance, but is applicable where excess is grave. No justification here.

Warrant or order must issue (1) within jurisdiction; (2) apparently so; or (3) without jurisdiction. Officers protected in either of the first two cases.

Except those of the House of Commons.

Bradlaugh v. Erskine.

Rule in Turner v. Fellgate and Cotes v. Michill.

It has been already stated that the officer can claim the protection of the warrant only in those cases where there has been accurate performance. This proposition needs a further limitation. The execution of a warrant or order of a superior Court at common law must take place under one of three conditions. Either the warrant or order must be (1) within the jurisdiction of the Court which issues it, or (2) apparently so, or (3) clearly outside such jurisdiction. The rule of law is that where an officer is acting under a warrant issued subject to either the first or second conditions, he is under no liability whatever on account of the execution, provided with no unnecessary force or violence he does simply what he was directed to do (g).

But in the case of warrants and orders of the House of Commons the protection is confined to the first case only, namely, where such House had jurisdiction to issue the warrant or order.

In Stockdale v. Hansard (h) it was held no defence to an action for publishing a libel that the defamatory matter was part of a document which was by order of the House of Commons laid before the House, and thereupon became part of the proceedings of the House, and which was afterwards by order of the House printed and published by the defendants, on the ground that the existence of such privilege as would support the plea was negatived. On the other hand, in Bradlaugh v. Erskine (i), to a claim for damages for an assault committed on the plaintiff, a member of parliament, while attempting to enter the House for the purpose of taking his seat, defendant pleaded in justification thereof that the House had previously resolved and ordered that the defendant should "remove plaintiff from the House until he should engage no further to disturb the proceedings of the House," and that acting in pursuance of such order, defendant insisted and removed plaintiff. It was held on demurrer that the plea was good on the ground that the right of the Houses to impose discipline within their walls was absolute and exclusive (j).

"Writs issued by a superior Court not appearing to be out of the scope of their jurisdiction are valid and of themselves without any further allegation, a protection to all officers and others in their aid acting under them; and that although they be on the face of them irregular as a capias against a peeress (jj) or void in form as a capias ad respondendum not returnable the next term (k) for the officers ought not to examine the judicial act of the Court whose servants they are, nor exercise their judgment touching the validity of the process in point of law, but are bound to execute it, and are therefore protected by it" (l).

If the process issue from a Court or person having competent jurisdiction, it will confer an authority even though there be error or irregularity in the previous proceedings (m) or the charge contained in it be utterly unfounded (n). But if it be defective on the face of it, as if there be a mistake in the name of the party to be arrested, or if the name of the officer or party to be arrested be inserted without authority and after the issue of the process, the apprehension may be resisted and the killing of the officer will be manslaughter only (o).

The phrase above quoted "for the officers ought not to examine the judicial act of the Court whose servants they are, nor exercise their judgment touching the validity of the process in point of law," is one which requires interpretation. It may be thus stated. Being satisfied that the act of which the process issuing in a due and regular manner is the consequence, is the judicial act of the Court whose servants they are, they are not to inquire further, but are bound to execute it. But it is quite clear that they are bound to inquire so far as to satisfy themselves that it is the judicial act of such Court. And it is obvious that it may prove not to be so in two modes—first, that the process is feigned, forged, or simulated, and is not the process or order of the Court (p), or second (which is the third condition under which such warrants and orders may issue) that the Court has in the specific instance manifestly exceeded its jurisdiction (q), inasmuch as it was unable to take cognizance of the cause or matter in which the process issued (r).

Here it is no defence to the officer if he execute it, and he can derive no protection from it.

With regard to justification, it has been held that a man acting under legal authority is not confined to the authority under which he has professed to act at the time when he acted, but he may resort to any other authority which justified his proceeding (s). Again, where the judgment is subsequently reversed as being wrong in point of law, all irregular process under it before the appeal is heard is good, and affords a justification to all parties acting under it (t).

Pleading. In pleading, the defendant is bound to set forth the warrant, and rest his justification upon it (u), but he need state nothing in the defence but the issue thereof (v).

The greater part of the cases which occur in which officers of the superior Courts are concerned are those in which the defendant is—

THE SHERIFF,

Sheriff. whose position in point of law is peculiar. Although he is the officer entrusted with the execution of the Queen's writs (w), practically he never executes in person, but employs under-sheriffs, bound bailiffs, and others, for that purpose. The writ which goes to the sheriff has upon its face an injunction to make out his warrant to his bailiff to levy the execution in question. The justification of the sheriff is the writ, of the bailiff the warrant (x).

Form thereof immaterial so far as liability of sheriff concerned. From this principle it follows that so far as the liability of the sheriff is concerned, it matters not what is the form of the warrant which he issues to the bailiff. He is not only liable for the acts of the bailiff done under the warrant (y), but also for any mistake or misconduct committed in the course of the execution (z). It is no defence for the sheriff to say that his orders were not attended to. He still remains liable, provided the act complained of be one which the officer was bound to do while acting in execution of the sheriff's orders (a), and an actual recognition by the sheriff of such acts is not necessary (b).

"There is no doubt that the sheriff is liable for all acts done and neglects of duty by the bailiff in the execution of a writ, on the ground that if the sheriff thinks fit to commit the execution of a writ, which he is bound to execute, to another, he is responsible if that person does not execute it properly, and is in the same condition as if he had executed it himself (c), the case of a sheriff differing in this respect from the liability of an ordinary principal, for the acts of an agent who does not pursue the authority committed to him" (d). And this is so "for the sake of securing a responsible recourse for indemnity in case of any wrong done in the execution of process" (e).

is sufficient to produce the warrant, without the writ, and it lies upon the sheriff to prove that no such writ issued (f), but the mere proof that the officer is the bailiff of the sheriff, without producing the warrant is not sufficient (g) unless there be recognition by the sheriff that the officer acted under his authority, which will dispense with the necessity of producing the warrant (h). If the officer swear that the warrant existed, though it be lost, it is sufficient (i), and in such cases secondary evidence is admissible (j).

warrant.

Where the warrant recites the writ, evidence of the judgment is not necessary (k). And it has been held that the sheriff need not prove the writ where the plaintiff claims by virtue of an assignment which is void as against creditors (l).

Of writ.

Where the sheriff is sued for removing goods without paying a year's rent in arrear, the plea of "not guilty" admits the seizure by the sheriff, and the production of the warrant is unnecessary (m).

Proof of the indorsement of the officer's name on the writ by a clerk in the under-sheriff's office is prima facie evidence to connect the sheriff (n).

ment.

Where the execution took place at the time of year when the sheriffs were changed, and a witness after the case was set down for trial saw a form of return signed by the defendant, as sheriff, indorsed on the writ, which had never been returned, it was held sufficient to shew that he was the sheriff who executed the writ. The writ, when produced, having the name of the sheriff erased, it was held for the jury to say whether the erasure was made to correct a mistake, or to defeat the plaintiff (o).

After
of office.

In an action against a surviving sheriff of London, a return to a writ directed to both sheriffs, purporting to be that of both is conclusive to shew that the return was authorised by the survivor (p).

survivor.

Admissions made by an officer while in possession under a writ are evidence against the sheriff (q), and if the officer be guilty of excess, even though it be contrary to the orders of the under-sheriff, the sheriff will not be allowed to bring evidence which would tend to disclaim his responsibility (r).

Swearing officer. A sheriff's officer who is subpoenaed to produce his warrant, need not be sworn (s).

The Under-Sheriff.

Under-sheriff. With regard to the under-sheriff, it appears that he is, while acting in that capacity, not liable for any neglect of duty, nor will an action lie against him for any default in him. For all such neglect or default, the sheriff is alone responsible (t). But No liability. this rule does not extend to cases of extortion on the part of this Other than criminal. officer when proceeded against criminally, nor to any other liability criminally for unauthorised acts (u).

Or where sheriff dies. Where the sheriff dies, the under-sheriff must, until a successor be appointed, execute the office of sheriff, and while so doing he is liable in all respects as the sheriff, and may appoint a deputy (v).

Proof of authority. Where an assignment of a lease by deed taken in execution was made in the name and under the seal of office of the sheriff, by A. B., acting as under sheriff, it was held that such assignment was sufficiently proved without further proving the appointment of A. B., as under-sheriff (w).

The Bailiff.

Bailiff. Bailiffs are of three kinds, namely, special bailiffs, bound Three kinds. bailiffs, and bailiffs of liberties.

Special. A special bailiff is one appointed by the sheriff for the execution of a particular writ at the instance of the execution-creditor, or some other person similarly interested or his agent (x).

Effect of appointment of. The effect of the selection of such a bailiff is to relieve the sheriff from responsibility to the party at whose instance he was appointed (y), but to all other persons he is liable in the usual manner (z).

How constituted. What constitutes a special bailiff is matter of evidence in each case (a). A mere request that a particular officer may be employed is not sufficient (b), nor is mere interference with the officer on the part of the debtor (c).

Bound bailiff. A bound bailiff is the one usually employed by the sheriff. It is no part of the duty of this officer to receive writs of execution from the parties (d).

If the warrant be addressed to him alone, and not to him and his assistants, he must himself execute it (e), or, at any rate, be near at the time of execution (f).

Execution by.

The receipt of money by the bailiff in satisfaction of a judgment-debt is receipt by the sheriff, and the sheriff is liable therefor, although there is no evidence of the money coming to his hands (g).

Receipt of money by.

The bailiff would appear to be personally liable for a false return (h).

False return.

There is no liability criminally on the part of the sheriff for the acts of the bailiff (i), and this includes proceedings for penalties for extortion against the officer (j). In such case the sheriff is irresponsible (k).

Criminal liability.

A liberty is a district in regard to which grants have been anciently made by the Crown to individuals conferring on them or their bailiffs the exclusive privilege of executing legal process therein (l). Westminster and Pontefract are instances of such liberties.

Bailiffs of liberties.

The powers, duties, and liabilities of a bailiff of a liberty are similar to those of a bound bailiff (m).

When the king is a party, or the writ contains a non omittas clause, the sheriff or his officer must enter the franchise and execute the writ. And in any other case he may enter, and the execution is not on that account irregular; but the lord may recover compensation from the sheriff, for an infringement of his right; though the party against whom the writ was issued has no remedy (n).

When sheriff to enter liberty.

When the sheriff has made out his mandate to the bailiff of a liberty, the bailiff and not the sheriff is responsible (o).

Liability of bailiff.

Process directed in the first instance to the bailiff of a franchise is void (p), and the bailiff executing it is guilty of a trespass against the party whose goods are taken in execution, for he is not the recognised officer of the Court, but the sheriff (q).

The sheriff's mandate requires the bailiffs of the liberty to make their return to the sheriff; but, in practice, such return is made direct to the Court (r).

UNDER WARRANTS AND ORDERS OF SUPERIOR COURTS NOT AT COMMON LAW, OF INFERIOR COURTS, AND OFFICERS GENERALLY.

A.—AFTER ADJUDICATION.

Under warrants and orders of superior Courts not at common law, of inferior Courts, and officers generally. A. After adjudication.

Liability.

When made without jurisdiction.

Onus of proof as to jurisdiction on defendant.

No trespass for error in form.

The liability of an officer when acting under a warrant or order of this class where there has been an adjudication is practically identical with that of an officer acting under warrant or order of a superior Court at common law, the main distinction being that which was pointed out at the commencement of the work, namely, that whereas the presumption in favour of jurisdiction is general in the case of warrants and orders of the kind last mentioned, it extends only to what appears on the face of the particular instrument in the case of these warrants and orders.

Putting aside this distinction, the rule as to liability is the same, namely, that where an officer acts under a warrant or order of the class we are now considering, which shews on its face to have been made (1) within the jurisdiction of the Court or person issuing it, or (2) apparently so, it is a complete justification to the officer (a). On the other hand, where it clearly appears to have been made without such jurisdiction, being beyond the scope of the powers delegated to the Court or officer issuing it, it is no protection to the officer, and he can derive no shelter from what is practically a piece of waste paper (b).

It is necessary for a party who relies upon the decision of an inferior tribunal to shew that the proceedings were within the jurisdiction of the Court (c). An officer of an inferior Court may justify acting under process which is only voidable, but not under void process (d). But in an action by A. against B. for false imprisonment, B. cannot defend himself under a justice's warrant against C., although A. was charged for felony before the magistrate, and was the person against whom the warrant was intended to issue (e). "It would be dangerous if a person whose office is purely ministerial, were allowed to sit in judgment and say who is the unnamed person intended by the warrant which he is required to execute" (f).

Trespass is only maintainable where the process is an absolute nullity, not where it is merely erroneous in form (g). Where there is no jurisdiction as above stated, the whole proceeding being coram non judice, process is no protection against such an action (h).

The doctrine of trespass ab initio is as applicable to cases arising under these warrants and orders as to those of superior Courts at common law (i); but since the greater part of these warrants are issued either by County Courts or by justices to both classes of which a special form of protection is afforded, the point becomes of little practical value. Moreover, under certain statutes, it is expressly laid down that officers acting under warrants issued thereunder shall not be liable as such trespassers (j).

Trespass
ab initio.
Special protection in some cases.

As to warrants of the County Court it is laid down that the high bailiff is by himself or by the bailiffs appointed to assist him to execute them, and he is to be responsible for the acts and defaults of himself and such bailiffs as the sheriff is for himself and his officers (k).

High bailiff.
Liability.

The high bailiff however of the Court out of which a warrant originally issues is not responsible for any irregularities in its execution by the bailiff of another Court, even though his own bailiff assisted therein (l).

And for the protection of this officer it is provided that no action shall be commenced against any bailiff or against any person acting by the order or in aid of any bailiff for anything done in obedience to any warrant under the hand of the registrar and the seal of the Court until demand has been made or left at the office of such bailiff by the party intending to bring such action or by his solicitor or agent in writing, signed by the party demanding the same, of the perusal and copy of such warrant and the same has been refused or neglected for the space of six days after such demand, and in case after such demand and compliance therewith by shewing the said warrant to and permitting a copy to be taken thereof by the party demanding the same any action shall be brought against such bailiff or other person acting in his aid for any such cause as aforesaid without making the registrar who signed or sealed the

This section and section 53 (n) cover cases where the warrant has been made without jurisdiction (o).

Constables,
&c.

A similar enactment, substituting the words "constable or other officer" for "bailiff" and "justice" for "registrar" is in force for the protection of officers acting under warrants of justices (p).

With reference to this latter enactment, it has been held that it does not apply to warrants of the Queen's Bench (q) nor of the Secretary of State (r), nor of commissioners of taxes (s), and that it extends only to actions of tort (t).

It seems however to refer to all officers generally (u), although not in an action of replevin (v).

Where the
applies.

In order to obtain the benefit of the statute the officer must shew that he acted in obedience to the warrant, and did not exceed his authority (w), and that he has complied with the terms of the section (x); but if he has exceeded his duty, but such excess was committed in the bonâ fide belief that he was acting in execution thereof, he is equally entitled to the protection (y). And it applies though the warrant be granted without jurisdiction (z), or the magistrates without authority order the suspension of the execution (a).

If, however, the officer loses the protection of the statute, he must justify under the warrant (b).

The statute does not apply unless there be a remedy over (supposing the warrant illegal) against the magistrate who issues it (c).

civil process (e), or where goods are seized not mentioned in the warrant, and not likely to be of use as evidence (f), or where the officer has executed it outside his jurisdiction (g).

The demand is good if signed by the plaintiff, his attorney or agent, and served or left by any other person (h), and though it require the perusal and copy to be given within three days (i).

As regards the County Court it is enacted that no officer shall be deemed a trespasser by reason of any irregularity or informality in any proceeding on the validity of which such warrant depends, or in the form of such warrant, or in the mode of executing it (j). And the same rule applies to officers acting under warrants of justices (k).

And where constables execute warrants for the recovery of tenements, they are under no liability on account of the person on whose application the warrant is granted having no lawful right to the possession of the premises (l).

B.—WHERE NO ADJUDICATION.

It has been already pointed out that in the case of warrants and orders other than those of superior Courts at common law, the officer is under no liability for executing them where it appears on the face of the instrument either (1) that the Court or person issuing them had, or (2) apparently had jurisdiction to do so. But this is confined to cases where there has been an adjudication.

Where, however, there has been no adjudication, the rule as to liability is a different one. Acting under such warrants and orders the officer is protected only where the person or body issuing them had jurisdiction to do so, and the execution thereof is strictly carried out. If there was apparently jurisdiction when none in fact or clearly none at all, the warrant or order is equally valueless (m).

But with this rule must be coupled the statute passed for the protection of officers acting under warrants of justices, and which we have discussed above (n), the greater number of warrants of this class being issued by those judicial officers.

Where an act can be done in a legal manner, the person giving the direction is not responsible for the act done if it be carried out in an illegal manner unless the relation of master and servant (o) exists between the person giving the direction and the person executing it (p).

C.—OTHER ORDERS.

C. Under other orders.

Liability of principal and agent.

General agent.

Particular agent.

Ratification, effect of.

Evidence as to limits of authority.

In regard to the other orders which have been enumerated above (a), it is obvious that they divide themselves into two classes, namely, general and specific. In both of these the law of principal and agent strictly applies.

Where an officer is appointed by some person or body to do a class of acts, he becomes by virtue of his appointment the general agent of such person or body while acting in the performance of his duty. The liability in such cases of the principal has been thus stated:—A person [or body] who puts another in his place to do a class of acts in his absence is answerable for the wrong of the person so entrusted, either in the manner of doing such an act or in doing such an act under circumstances in which it ought not to have been done; provided that what is done is not done from any caprice of the servant, but in the course of the employment (b).

A local authority in their public capacity are liable for any negligence of their servants (c).

Where, however, the officer is appointed or directed to do some particular thing and that only, the liability of the person or body so appointing or directing him is more limited. In such cases the agent only binds the principal when acting in strict accordance with his instructions (d).

Moreover, the principal is in any case liable if the act complained of be one which was done for his benefit, whether or not there was any precedent authority, if the principal subsequently ratify the act (e).

Where there is a violation of a right to property or to personal security, he who procures the wrong to be done is a joint wrongdoer, and may be sued either alone or jointly with the agent for the wrong done (f). If an assault or imprisonment of the plaintiff be the necessary or probable consequence of orders given by the defendant, he will be responsible, although he did not directly order it or contemplate the possibility of its occurrence (g).

What is within or without the scope of the authority is matter of evidence. Where a servant wantonly and not in order to execute the master's orders, struck the plaintiff's horses and thereby produced an accident, the master was held not liable; but if in the course of the employment he so struck, although injudiciously, it would have been otherwise (h). Again, where a servant wholly exceeded his authority in arresting a person and did an act which was illegal, not in the mode of doing it, but in the doing it at all, the principal was held irresponsible (i). But where the act was one which the agent must be assumed to have authority to do, if there was a mistake in the performance of it, such mistake was held within the scope of the authority (j).

The fact, however, of the principal becoming liable does not exonerate the agent from his liability for tortious acts done by him. He may therefore be sued either separately or jointly with his principal (k). Liability of agent.

The relationship of principal and agent is unknown to the criminal law. If the principal direct the agent to do a criminal act, they are both liable as principals (l). On the other hand, if the agent do a criminal act unknown to the principal but purporting to act by his authority, the principal is irresponsible (m). Criminal liability.

With regard to the principals which are referred to in this class, the general rule as to their liability inasmuch as the powers which they exercise are conferred upon them by law, is that they are liable for any damage which has resulted from the doing of the act as individuals are (n); but as the powers which are exercised are almost wholly derived from statute, due regard to the wording of the Act in question must be had in order to ascertain what liability exists in any particular case. And in such circumstances the general rule appears to be the following, namely, that where the duty imposed is discretionary, or at any rate not absolute, the ordinary law as to liability for damage occasioned obtains (o). On the other hand, where the duty to be performed is of an absolute character, such liability is under the special circumstances negatived (p). Liability of principal.

UNDER INHERENT POWERS.

*Under
powers.
Liability.*

Where a public officer acts, or purports to act, by virtue of the powers which the law confers upon him, and while so acting is guilty of any illegality by way of commission or omission, he is personally responsible to the individual who has sustained damage thereby (a).

Every one who is appointed to discharge a public duty and receives a compensation, whether from the Crown or otherwise, is constituted a public officer (b).

The liability, however, of such officers is not confined to cases where there has been either excess of the authority conferred or breach of the duty imposed by law. It extends also to cases where the officer is strictly within the powers conferred on him, but guilty of harsh and oppressive conduct in their exercise. Where a Governor and Vice-Admiral of a Crown Colony suspended the judge of the Vice-Admiralty Court, but maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause, although he had legal authority to do so until the King's pleasure became known and the King subsequently confirmed the suspension, he was held notwithstanding liable in damages (c). The gist of the action was, admitting the legality of the suspension thus confirmed, but complaining of the defendant's exercise of his original authority, and his malicious and false representations by which the suspension had been confirmed (d).

*Joint
doers.*

Whoever assists in the doing of an unlawful act becomes answerable for all the consequences of it, and when several persons have been jointly concerned in its commission they may generally all be charged jointly as principals, or the plaintiff may sue any of the parties upon whom individually a separate trespass attaches (e). If several are jointly bound to perform a duty, they are liable jointly and severally for the failure or refusal (f). And the same measure of liability attaches where several commit a trespass (g).

Judgment in an action against one of several joint trespassers is a bar to an action against the others for the same cause, although such judgment remains unsatisfied (h). But the cause of action must in both suits be identical (i).

Connected with the subject of liability is the principle which was illustrated in the case of Armory v. Delamirie (j), namely, that contained in the maxim—

“Omnia præsumuntur contra spoliatorem.”

Every presumption shall be made to the disadvantage of a wrongdoer. If an officer use the powers which he possesses against an individual on any other than public grounds, he becomes a wrongdoer, and this principle is applicable. Where a person who wrongfully converted property, refused to produce it, it was presumed as against him to be of the best description (k). Where a person claimed a debt from another, the proof of which was to be found in certain documents which were sealed up and in his keeping, and he broke the packet without authority to do so, the claim was disallowed (l); and where a necklace was missed and part of it traced to the defendant, who was unable satisfactorily to account for it, the whole necklace was presumed to have come to his hands (m).

*Omnia

torem.*

EVIDENCE.

As to evidence, it is laid down that the fact that a person has acted in an official capacity is presumptive evidence of his appointment, and the formal appointment need not be proved (n); and this rule applies to both civil and criminal cases (o).

DAMAGES.

In general the damages will depend on the extent of the trespass or breach of duty committed. But where there is any high-handedness on the part of the officer, or attempt to use his powers unfairly to the prejudice of any member of the public, exemplary or vindictive damages will be recoverable (p); and these must depend on the particular circumstances of the case (q). And in such cases the Court will not interfere with the discretion of the jury unless they are grossly excessive or clearly founded upon a mistaken or improper view of the matter (r).

There is no power to charge the damages and costs recovered against an officer upon the public funds (s); and it is the same with penalties (t).

A sum due to an officer in respect of superannuation may, in the absence of direction by statute to the contrary, be attached in execution (u).

Connected with the subject of damages is the doctrine of Trespass ab initio.

Trespass
ab initio.

Where a power to enter upon lands or tenements is conferred by law on an individual, and when he has entered in pursuance thereof he commits a misfeasance (i.e. exceeds his authority), it shall be presumed that he entered with the intention of exceeding his authority, and that the trespass committed shall have relation back to the time of entering. REMEDIES.

PROTECTION.

1. Prerogative.

The Crown may, in the case of action arising against any of its officers, for anything done to which it is a party (a), demand a trial at bar, on the ground that it has an interest in the subject-matter of the suit (b). In that case it will be for "the plaintiff to shew the Court that it is misinformed" (c), and that the statement of the Attorney-General that the Crown is interested is groundless. If he fails to satisfy the Court as to this, the suit will become a Crown suit, and be regulated by the Crown Suits Act, 1865. The procedure in a Crown suit does not come within the scope of this work.

It may, however, be here observed that by the Crown electing to come in and defend, it necessarily takes upon itself the responsibility for the act complained of, on the ground of the maxim, "Omnis rati habitio retrotrahitur et mandato priori æquiparatur" (d).

But no damages can be obtained against the Crown, for "the Crown can do no wrong" (e). In the event, therefore, of judgment being given for the plaintiff, "the redress, if any, must be by petition of right, which is now regulated by 23 & 24 Vict. c. 34. Under sect. 9 of that Act, he obtains a judgment that he is entitled to such relief as the Court shall think just" (f).

2. Statutory Absolute.

Customs and Excise officers, wreck receivers, and officers acting under the Explosives and Public Health Acts, are furnished with absolute statutory protection in a few cases.

Customs and Excise officers are so protected for seizing goods as liable to forfeiture where there was probable cause for such seizure (g); in stopping carts and wagons to search for smuggled goods, though none be found (h); for firing into ships liable to

3. Statutory Ordinary.

3. Statutory ordinary. Nearly the whole of the officers enumerated in this work have in certain cases a special protection conferred on them when acting in pursuance of their powers, which may, in order to distinguish it from the other kinds of protection referred to above, be termed the ordinary statutory protection. Its leading characteristics are notice, limitation, local venue, tender of amends, payment into Court, and, in some cases, special verdicts.

These enactments refer in their entirety to actions of tort. In the case of prosecutions, the protection is limited to limitation and a local venue.

Where Acts conferring powers refer to a principal Act containing protection, that protection is available under the subordinate Acts.

When available. The protective clauses usually open with the words: "In case any action shall be brought against any officer for anything done in pursuance of this Act." These words have been held to include the omission to do as well as the commission of an act or acts (o).

They are "required for the purpose of protecting these officers in those cases where they intended to act within the strict line of their duty, but by mistake exceeded it" (p). Their object is "clearly to protect persons acting illegally, but in supposed pursuance and with a bonâ fide intention of discharging their duty" (q).

The defendant is entitled to the protection if he honestly believes in the existence of a state of things which, if it had existed, would have justified his doing the acts complained of under the statute. Some facts must exist such as might give rise to an honest belief, but it is not necessary that the belief should be reasonable (r).

A County Court officer is protected while acting under warrant of the Court, although there was no jurisdiction to make the order on which the warrant was founded (s). And so is a tax-collector if he bonâ fide believe a sum demanded to be due (t). But not if there was no colour for the demand, or he makes an improper seizure, and takes a bribe to deliver up the goods (u), or is guilty of extortion under threat of legal proceedings or distress (v).

A sheriff sued for an excessive levy is not within the protection (w); nor is a surveyor if, in obeying the orders of the Highway Board, he does an unlawful act (x); but a local authority for anything done, or intended to be done, under their Act is so (y).

NOTICE.

The cases in which notice is necessary have been discussed above when we were considering when protection is available. It is necessary whenever the officer purports to act in pursuance of the statute (z). Notice.

It appears, however, to apply only to such acts as the officer might at the date of the statute conferring the right to notice have been called upon to perform (a). And the officer is not deprived of his right because he has received an indemnity against the consequences of his act by the party interested (b).

An officer who takes under a County Court warrant the goods of B. by mistake for those of A. is entitled to notice (c).

But where a constable is authorized to arrest a person found committing an offence, to entitle to notice it must be shewn that at the time of the arrest he believed the offence to have been committed, and that he had found the person arrested in the act of committing it (d); unless taken in flagrante delicto, it must be shewn that an offence had been committed, that the plaintiff was on the spot, that there was reasonable ground for believing that the mischief was still going on, and that the plaintiff was the author and instigator of it (e).

Officers sued to recover back money paid which had been by mistake illegally demanded, are entitled to notice (f), and so are surveyors acting bonâ fide in a public capacity (g), although under an appointment in fact informal and illegal (h).

notice.

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, s. 4, in all cases where notice is necessary, one calendar month is to be sufficient. And there may be a whole month between the date of the doing of the act complained of and the date of the commencement of the action (i). But this Act does not apply to enactments passed subsequent thereto (j).

What it
contain.

The notice should set forth the substantial ground of complaint, and specify the time and place of the commission of the act complained of (k). It should also state that an action will be brought (l). It is not necessary, however, to name all the persons meant to be made parties, nor to express whether it is intended to be brought against several persons jointly or against one person only (m), and a reference to a wrong statute has been held immaterial (n), and so has an inaccuracy as to the date of arrest (o).

If it fails clearly and explicitly to point out the nature of the cause of action, it will be bad (p). But it ought not to be construed with great strictness, its object being merely to inform the defendant of the substantial ground of complaint, but not of the mode or manner in which the injury has been sustained (q). And it may be contained in a series of letters, as well as in a single document (r).

Care must be taken to address the notice to the right parties, and to serve it in the proper quarter (s).

An action may apparently be brought without notice, when AMENDS.

Amends.

Most of the Acts also provide that the defendant may at any time after action brought tender a sum of money by way of amends and that in case such sum be not accepted by the plaintiff in satisfaction of his claim, that the same may be paid into Court and in a few cases pleaded by the defendant in bar of such action. Such payment into Court is to have the same effect in law as in other actions where defendants are allowed to pay money into Court (y).

The payment of money into Court by way of amends does not necessarily conclude the plaintiff (z).

Tender of amends and payment into Court is permitted as regards :—

VENUE.

The majority of the statutes provide that the action shall be tried in the county in which the fact complained of was committed. This has not been interfered with by the Judicature Acts (b). Venue.

The rule appears to apply only to such acts as the officer might, at the date of the statute conferring the right to venue, have been called on to perform (c). And a constable who arrests on suspicion of felony without reasonable ground for such suspicion seems to be within the rule (d).

Local venue is imposed as regards:—

PLEADING.

Pleading. The defendant is allowed in some instances to plead the general issue (e), and in a few cases any other plea by leave of the Court (f).

The plea is in the form "The defendant says he is not guilty," and this may be pleaded whenever he honestly believed in the existence of a state of things which if it had existed would have justified his doing the acts complained of under the statute (g). In the margin must be inserted the words "by statute," and the year of the reign, chapter, and section of the Act on which he relies (h), except where he relies on the whole Act or Acts, in which case the sections need not be specified (i).

This may be pleaded by a constable who is sued in trespass for false imprisonment (j). But if an officer join in pleading with another who cannot justify, he loses the benefit of the justification (k).

In actions under statute. In actions under statutes, it is not necessary to recite the statute in the claim; it is enough to state that the thing was done contrary to the statute in that case made and provided (l).

For plaintiff.

The defendant is permitted under the plea of the general issue to give the Act and the special matter in evidence under the statutes enumerated below. For defendant.

Where officers exceed their jurisdiction they can apparently avail themselves of this protection only in mitigation of damages and not as a substantive defence to the action (n).

Where an action was for an injunction, it was held that costs as between solicitor and client could not be given to a successful defendant (q).

Treble costs were abolished (r) by statute, but the Act does not apply to enactments passed subsequently thereto (s).

Where the defendant makes an affidavit that the plaintiff if unsuccessful will be unable to pay costs, and the plaintiff fails thereupon to give security for such costs, the action may be remitted to the County Court (t).

BREACH OF DUTY.

CIVIL PROCEEDINGS.

Action for Damages.

*Breach of Duty.
Civil pro-

Action for damages.*

Duty at
law.

Where a person undertakes a public office, he is bound to perform the duties of the office, and if he neglects or refuses so to do, and an individual in consequence sustains injury therefrom, that lays the foundation for an action for damages to recover compensation for the injury so sustained (a).

When a duty or obligation exists at common law independently of a statute, a new remedy given by a statute is simply cumulative, and does not preclude the ordinary common law remedy by way of action, unless there are express words to that effect (b).

Statutory
duty.

When a statute creates a right or duty, then although it has not in express terms given a remedy, the remedy which by law is properly applicable follows as an incident (c). But if the right or duty is entirely the creature of the statute, and a specific remedy is provided by the statute for its enforcement, that remedy and that only must be pursued (d), unless the remedy does not cover the entire right (e).

Duty must
lute.

These principles apply apparently only when the duty to be performed is an absolute one, and not within the discretion of the officer.

The rule as to liability may therefore be thus stated. Whenever the law confers upon an officer a power to do a certain act by an obligatory (f) as distinguished from an enabling (g) enactment, there is then a corresponding duty in the officer to perform the act required in which if he fail, he will be liable to an action at the suit of the person who has sustained damage by reason of his default. On the other hand if the duty is optional or discretionary, no such liability (in the absence of malice)

(e) Shepherd v. Hills, 11 Ex. 67.

As to pleading in actions under statute, see Holmes v. Sparkes, ante, p. 160.

(f) E.g., "is hereby required."
(g) E.g., "may" or "it shall be lawful." See Julius v. Oxford (Bishop of), 5 App. Cas. 214; McDonnell v. Paterson, 11 C. B. 755; 21 L. J. C. P. 27; Crake v. Powell, 2 E. & B. 210; 21 L. J. Q. B. 183; Bell v. Crane, L. R. 8 Q. B. 481; 42 L. J. M. C. 122; Re Newport Bridge, 29 ib. 52.

exists (h). But to this there is an important qualification. "It has been so often decided as to have become an axiom, that in public statutes words only directory, permissive, or enabling, may have a compulsory force where the thing to be done is for the public benefit or in advancement of public justice" (i), and this has been held to mean that where a power is deposited with a public officer for the purpose of being used for the benefit of persons who are specifically pointed out, and with regard to whom a definition is supplied by the legislature of the conditions upon which they are entitled to call for its exercise that power ought to be exercised, and the Court will require its exercise (j).

In practice, however, where a duty is conferred, although it is possible, yet it is not very probable that action would arise owing to the fact that the plaintiff had sustained damage by reason of the officer's neglect.

But there is a notable exception in the case of civil execution. There a person is entitled to put an officer in motion to do a certain act or acts, and if he fails to perform the duty so required of him, it gives rise to this action.

Practically confined to civil execution.

The officers concerned in civil execution are the sheriff, the Admiralty marshal, and the high bailiff, who so far as liability is in question may be considered one (k), and constables.

As regards the sheriff, it has been laid down that if he neglect or refuse to execute any writ when he has the opportunity and is required to do so, he is liable (l), but that he is not liable for not using extraordinary exertion or providing against an unexpected or unforeseen contingency (m). Accordingly, if he neglects to execute within a reasonable time (n), or to seize (o), or to sell or sells for less money than he ought to have obtained (p), or sells the goods of a third person (q), or relinquishes or abandons possession (r), although mere temporary absence (s), or withdrawing under a proper order is not sufficient (t), he is liable. So also is he if he negligently conduct a sale whereby the position of the execution creditor is prejudiced (u), or sells by private contract, when entitled to do so, before actual seizure (v), or retains the goods and pays the plaintiff (w), or delivers the goods to the plaintiff in satisfaction of the debt (x), or executes the writ and retains in his hands the proceeds (y). But the execution creditor cannot sue the sheriff before the issue of the venditioni exponas (z), nor is he liable if he sell under a venditioni exponas (a), under an extent which is in from the Crown at the same time (b).

An application for an order against a sheriff to pay money levied under an execution must be made by motion after notice (c).

False return.

He is also liable if he make a false return—that is a return to the writ which does not describe accurately the position of affairs (d). But if the sheriff merely return the answer of the bailiff which proves to be false, he is not, it appears, responsible (e). A writ is not now returned to by order, but a notice to return from the person issuing the writ or his solicitor issues (f). The return must answer the whole mandate of the writ. He may return nulla bona where the debtor has an equitable interest only (g), and also where the proceeds are exhausted in payment of prior rent and charges (h); but not where there are goods in his hands unsold (i), nor where he ought to have levied and neglected to do so (j). If he returns that he has seized certain goods, he ought to specify their value (k); but he cannot return that a house is barricaded and he cannot enter to see what goods are there (l).

Inter-

In order to claim the benefit of the Interpleader Act he must be in possession of the goods (m) as a whole (n), unless the property would be injured by seizure (o). He must not be an interested party (p), nor have been indemnified (q), but he need not wait for an action to be brought (r). Where he has exercised his discretion he is not entitled to relief (s), nor where he is guilty of neglect (t) or laches (u), except under special circumstances (v). He must inquire into the bona fides of the claims before applying for relief (w).

For neglect of duty the representatives of a deceased sheriff are also liable (x).

An action against the sheriff in these cases cannot be maintained without shewing actual pecuniary damage (y), but where damages are alleged and proved, they are recoverable without proof of malice or want of probable cause (z).

In an action for a false return, the sheriff may shew the facts in support of his defence (a), but he cannot go into circumstantial evidence to impeach the judgment on the ground of collateral fraud (b).

Admissions of the bailiff in these cases are evidence against the sheriff (c), but not those of the under-sheriff, unless they accompany some official act or tend to charge himself (d).

The measure of damages in cases of neglect of duty by the sheriff is usually the value of the goods (e).

By 56 Geo. 3, c. 50, s. 9, the sheriff is not liable for damages for anything done under that Act (f) unless there be wilful omission on his part.

By 50 & 51 Vict. c. 55, s. 29 the sheriff or his officer for any breach of the provisions of the Act or neglect or default in the execution of his office is liable to forfeit £200 and to pay all damages suffered by any person aggrieved (g).

This applies apparently only to personal misconduct or neglect on the part of the officer actually guilty thereof, and in such case the sheriff, therefore is not responsible for the act of his officer (h).

But if he make out a warrant prior to the receipt of the writ this action will lie against him (i), and so also will it if he omit to appoint a deputy (j).

As has been above stated, the liability of the Admiralty Marshal is identical with that of the sheriff.

High
bailiff.

As regards the high bailiff, besides the ordinary liability which is the same as that of the sheriff it is enacted that:—

In case any bailiff who shall be employed to levy any execution against goods and chattels shall by neglect or connivance or omission lose the opportunity of levying any such execution, then, upon complaint of the party aggrieved by reason of such neglect, connivance or omission (and the fact alleged being proved to the satisfaction of the Court on the oath of any credible witness), the judge shall order such bailiff to pay such damages as it shall appear that the plaintiff has sustained thereby (k).

This power of the judge does not extend over the high bailiff of a foreign Court (l).

Constables.

The only case in which constables are employed in civil execution at the suit of an individual is that for the recovery of tenements.

Other officers.

And, as regards other officers, it has been held that an action lies against a postmaster for non-delivery of letters (m), and a collector of customs for refusing to sign a bill of entry without payment of an excessive duty (n), and a highway surveyor for leaving large stones on a road under repair so placed as to cause an obstruction (o). But he is not bound to remove nuisances (p), nor liable for mere non-repair (q).

It lies also against a minister for refusing admission to the church on proper occasions (r), or for removing without authority a monument appended to the wall of the church (s), and against churchwardens for refusing admission to the church at service time of a parishioner (t).

Withhold-
dence.

*Omnia
præsumuntur contra
torem.*

As to evidence, if it is withheld it renders the maxim Omnia præsumuntur contra spoliatores applicable (u). Where a party has the means in his power of rebutting and explaining the evidence against him, if it does not tend to the truth, the omission to do so furnishes a strong inference against him (v). Where a public officer produces an instrument the execution of which he was bound to procure, as against him it is presumed to have been duly executed (w). And if it be defaced or destroyed slight evidence of the contents will usually be sufficient (x). The general rule in these cases is that the law excludes such evidence as from the nature of the thing, supposes still better evidence in the party's possession or power (y).

CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS.

Attachment.

In the case of the sheriff, Admiralty marshal, and high bailiff, all of whom are officers of the Court, this remedy is open to any person aggrieved by the neglect to perform the duty required of them (a). Attachment.

By 50 & 51 Vict. c. 55, s. 29, if any sheriff, under-sheriff, bailiff, or officer of a sheriff is guilty of any breach of the provisions of the Act, or of any neglect or default in the execution of his office, he may be punished by the Court as for a contempt (b). Sheriff.

In regard to the Admiralty marshal, as he is now an officer of the High Court, his liability is identical with that of the sheriff (c). Admiralty marshal.

As to the high bailiff, it is laid down by 51 & 52 Vict. c. 43, s. 131, that in case of refusal to act, any party requesting the act to be done may apply to the High Court for an order calling on the officer to shew why it should not be done, and that upon the officer's then making default, attachment may issue. High bailiff.

The incidents of attachment will be found stated below in the next chapter (d).

Information.

In the case of all officers other than those mentioned under the head of attachment, the remedy under the criminal law for breach of duty is by information at the suit of the party grieved. Information.

The majority of statutes which confer powers include penalties for breaches of public duty by the officers on whom the powers are conferred. To what officers applicable.

Every public officer commits a misdemeanour who wilfully neglects to perform any duty which he is bound either by common law or by statute to perform, provided that the discharge of such duty is not attended with greater danger than a man of ordinary firmness and activity may be expected to encounter (e).

(a) See Brainard v. Connecticut Railway, infra. Of course all officers who refuse to obey the mandates of the Courts are like other persons liable to attachment or committal. See R. v. Winton, 5 T. R. 89. An order for attachment or committal must be applied for on notice, Order xlv., r. 2: Jupp v. Cooper, 5 C. P. D.

Breaches of public duty are not, however, remediable at the suit of a private individual, unless he is able to prove that he has sustained actual damage by reason thereof (f).

An instance of breach of public duty is the withholding of material evidence. This is presumably perjury (g).

Where information is obtained from a constable he is bound to state in cross-examination if required by the judge or presiding magistrate to do so, the circumstances under which he had seen the facts to which he testified (h).

Another instance is where an officer refuses admission to a lock-up or place of detention, of a counsel or solicitor for a prisoner awaiting trial who is retained for his defence, or other person properly claiming to be admitted (i), or refuses to give bail when required by law to do so (j).

It has been held, however, that an indictment does not lie against a highway-surveyor for non-repair of the highway (k), but he may be summoned for this (kk) or for allowing heaps to remain on the highway at night to the danger of passengers (l), or for damaging mills, &c. (m) or neglect to fill up pits (n).

Mandamus.

Mandamus.

A word should be here inserted on mandamus. It is a prerogative writ issuing in the Queen's name and directed to a public officer requiring him to do a particular thing appertaining to his office and duty (o).

In its application it is confined to cases where no effectual relief can be obtained in the ordinary course of an action (p). And inasmuch as the cases in which damages could occur on account of breach of duty which are not obtainable by action are very rare; it is a remedy which for practical purposes need not be further discussed (q).

EXCESS OF POWER.

Self-Defence.

The first remedy which the law permits a man, against whom an excess of legal authority is being committed, to resort to, is that which can be applied on the spur of the moment—namely, self-defence. The law in reference thereto is as follows: It sanctions the defence of a man's person, liberty, and property against illegal violence, and permits the use of force to prevent crimes. . . yet all this is subject to the restriction that the force used is necessary, that is, that the mischief sought to be prevented could not be prevented by less violent means, and that the mischief done by, or which might reasonably be anticipated from the force used is not disproportioned to the injury or mischief which it is intended to prevent (a).

Excess of power.

Self defence.

The rule that a man shall retreat from an assailant before he uses force applies only to the use of such force as may inflict grievous bodily harm or death (b). If an officer be killed while exceeding his authority it is manslaughter only (c).

Fabrication of Evidence.

It will be convenient to insert here a few words on this head.

The fabrication of evidence, from a civil point of view, renders the maxim Omnia præsumuntur contra spoliatores applicable to the case (d). From a criminal point of view, if it consists in procuring false witnesses, it is subornation of perjury, and if the party tampered with does not actually take an oath, the person inciting him so to do, though not guilty of subornation, is still liable to punishment (e). In cases other than witnesses it is a misdemeanour at common law (f).

Fabrication of evidence.

Civil consequences.

Criminal consequences.

Of fabrication, the following are examples: Placing a pistol-ball in a tree in order to shew that a pistol, when discharged, was loaded with ball; soiling clothes to give the appearance of a struggle; fitting shoes to marks in earth or snow to connect the owner of the shoes with the offence; putting a portion of a newspaper into the pocket of a prisoner, his clothes being detained at a police-station, the corresponding portion being found at the scene of the crime; tampering with witnesses, including that of inducing another officer to swear falsely as to a fact.

CIVIL PROCEEDINGS.

Torts which are also crimes.

Where an excess of power has a twofold aspect—namely, tortious and criminal—it is remediable either by action or prosecution. The old rule that where a tort amounted to a felony no action could be maintained previous to prosecution is abrogated, and can no longer be set up as a defence to civil proceedings (g).

Assault and Battery.

Civil proceedings.
Assault
battery.

An assault is an attempt or offer to beat another without touching him, as if one lifts up a cane or his fist in a threatening manner at another or strikes at but misses him (h). A battery (which includes an assault) is the unlawful beating of another—the least touching of another's person wilfully or in anger (i), and this whether with the person or with any missile or weapon (j).

The fact of an assault being unintentional does not make it less an assault (k); but it may be urged in mitigation of damages (l); but if the act be neither wilful nor negligent no action will lie (m).

In the following cases it was held that an assault had been committed:—

Assault.

Where A. was advancing in a threatening attitude with an intention to strike B. so that his blow would have almost immediately reached B. if he had not been stopped, though at the particular moment when A. was stopped he was not near enough for his blow to take effect (n).

An examination by medical men in pursuance of an order of a magistrate of the person of a female in custody upon the charge of concealing the birth of her illegitimate child (o).

Riding after a person and obliging him to run away into a garden to avoid being beaten (p). Striking a man in a crowd for refusing to stand back, which he was unable to do for the crowd behind him (q), or for interfering with an officer engaged in preventing a breach of the peace (r).

Where plaintiff being in defendant's workshop and refusing to quit when desired, the defendant and his servants surrounded him and threatened to break his neck if he did not go out, whereupon the plaintiff, apprehensive of violence, departed (s).

A threat to shoot a person, coupled with the act of presenting a loaded fire-arm at him, although it is half-cocked (t).

In the following cases, no assault was held to have been committed :—

Where A. comes up to attack B., and B. puts himself into a fighting attitude to defend himself (u). No assault.

Presenting a loaded pistol, coupled with words shewing no intention to shoot the plaintiff (v).

Where A. seized the bridle of the horse on which B. was riding, and B., after a request to desist, struck A. with his riding-whip, using no more force than was necessary to obtain his release (w).

Where a constable was wholly passive and merely obstructed the entrance of a person into a room as any inanimate object would (x).

As regards threatening gestures, if the parties at the time the gestures are used are so far distant from each other that immediate contact is impossible, there is no assault (y).

With reference to procedure it is laid down that where the assault has been heard and determined by justices, a certificate by such justices of conviction or acquittal is a bar to all further proceedings (z). Procedure.
of justices.

Such a certificate cannot be granted on an ex parte statement (a), but to be valid it need not be granted at the time the summons is heard (b).

In a civil action, that the defendant consented to the assault is a good defence (c), and therefore the defence of leave and licence amounts to not guilty (d). Pleading.

The defence to complete justification must answer severally the assaults specified in the claim (e).

That of molliter manus imposuit is a good defence to a battery (f). But if there be violence it is negatived (g).

As to the defence of son assault demesne, this admits the assault (h). But it is a good defence provided there be no excess (i).

Evidence. Where A. and B. are joint defendants, that does not prevent A. pleading a justification to another and separate assault (j). To justify a battery the defendant must shew that there was an unlawful resistance on the part of the plaintiff to the lawful acts of the defendant (k). A sheriff's officer, it has been held, can only justify laying his hand upon a man in order to arrest him on a writ of process (l), or in case of resistance or an attempt to rescue him (m).

A plea justifying an assault on the ground that it was committed in dispersing a meeting, must either allege as a fact that the meeting was unlawful, or state facts from which its unlawfulness can be inferred (n).

Where plaintiff sued defendant for assault in taking him under a habeas corpus, after he had requested him not to do so, the writ having issued at the instance of the plaintiff, there being no sufficient evidence that the defendant knew at whose instance the writ issued, the assault was held justifiable (o).

Upon issue taken on a plea of son assault demesne it is necessary to prove an assault commensurate with the trespass sought to be justified (p). But the defendant may give evidence of an assault by the plaintiff without this plea (q).

Damages. And in any action of assault, though he has not pleaded justification, he may in cross-examination extract evidence in mitigation of damages (r).

As to damages, the Court will seldom interfere with the discretion of the jury, and the jury may take into consideration circumstances which go to aggravate or mitigate the injury sustained (s).

Where the assault has been carried to the extent of mayhem or wounding, heavy damages will be recoverable unless it be excused or justified (t).

Wherever the wrong is of a grievous nature, done with a high hand, or is accompanied with a deliberate intention to injure, or with words of contumely and abuse, the jury are authorized in giving vindictive damages (u).

This action must be commenced within four years next after the cause of such action, and not after (v). Limitation.

Extortion.

The cases which arise under this head are, as in the case of action for damages (w), mainly those concerned with civil execution. It will be advisable, therefore, to set out here the fees and charges which are payable to officers concerned in this process. Extortion.
Chiefly relates to civil execution.

Those of other officers where there are any, will be found stated with the powers enumerated in former parts of the work.

As regards the sheriff, he is entitled to charge the fees and poundage which were charged, prior to the Sheriffs' Act, 1887, until altered in pursuance of this Act (x). Sheriff.

The poundage allowed is for the first £100, 5 per cent., and afterwards 2½ per cent. (y). Poundage.

feri facias. writs of fi. fa., under order of 31st of August, 1888:—

1. For expenses incurred by the sheriff's officer in making inquiries as to the goods of an execution debtor, and as to claims for rent and other claims on the goods, the actual expenses not exceeding under any circumstances £1 1s.

2. For seizure by the sheriff's officer. For each building or place separately rated at which a seizure is made, £1 1s.

3. For mileage, to include the mileage of the bailiff or the man in possession, per mile from the sheriff's officer's residence, 1s.

The foregoing shall be paid by the execution creditor, and shall not be recoverable by him, although the execution proves abortive.

4. For man in possession, per day, 5s.

To provide his own board in every case.

5. For removal of goods or animals to a place of safe keeping, when necessary, the actual cost.

6. When goods or animals are removed, for warehousing and taking charge of the same (including feeding of animals), 2½ per cent. on the value of the goods or animals removed, or the sum endorsed on the writ of execution, whichever is the less. No fees for keeping possession of the goods or animals to be charged after the goods or animals have been removed.

7. For the inventory and valuation, cataloguing, lotting and preparing for sale, when no sale takes place by reason of the execution being withdrawn, satisfied, or stopped, 2½ per cent. on the value of the goods (b).

8. For advertising and giving publicity to the sale by auction, the sum actually and necessarily paid.

9. For commission to the auctioneer on a sale by auction, 7½ per cent. on the sum realized, not exceeding £100; £5 per cent. on the next £100, £4 per cent. on the next £200, and on any sum exceeding in all £500, £3 per cent. up to £1000, and £2½ per cent. on any sum exceeding £1000.

10. For any sale by private contract, half the percentage allowed on a sale by auction.

11. Poundage and fee for delivery of writ as before.

The foregoing fees 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, and 11, shall be levied in every case in which an execution is completed by sale, as fees payable to sheriff's were levied before the making of this order. In every case where an execution is withdrawn, satisfied, or stopped, the fees under this order shall be paid by the person issuing the execution, or the person at whose instance the sale is stopped, as the case may be; and the amount of any costs and charges payable under this scale shall be taxed by a Master of the Supreme Court or District Registrar of the High Court (as the case may be), in case the sheriff and the party liable to pay such costs and charges differ as to the amount thereof (c).

Proceeding against the sheriff for contempt does not preclude the plaintiff from bringing his action (d).

Fees are payable by the creditor (e), and whether the process be regular or irregular does not matter (f).

As to levy for fees and poundage it is doubtful whether this extends to elegit (g). It is probably confined to the charges (h).

Where the sheriff claims more than he is entitled to, it is not necessarily extortion (i).

The sheriff is entitled to deduct poundage though the parties compromise before he sells (j), and when the execution has been set aside for irregularity after the levy and payment over of the proceeds have been made (k). But where he leaves goods taken in execution with a person who parts with the possession of them, he may not retake them merely to secure his own poundage where the execution was fraudulent (l).

When he has seized and is in possession of the goods or lands, he is entitled to poundage (m). But the seizure must be actual and according to the writ (n). It is not necessary that he should proceed to a sale (o).

But a tender before seizure is equivalent to payment, and no poundage is payable in such cases (p), nor where after seizure and before sale the writ is set aside (q).

When bankruptcy supervenes after seizure and before sale,

(c) There is no appeal from this taxation: Townend v. Sheriff of Yorkshire, 24 Q. B. D. 621; 59 L. J. Q. B. 156; 62 L. T. 402; 38 W. R. 381; 51 J. P. 598.

Fees payable by creditor.

Levy for fees.

Excessive claim not always extortion.

Poundage on compromise.

Execution set aside.

Due on seizure.

Bankruptcy

no poundage is due as costs of the execution (r), nor are such costs expenses incurred while in possession for cutting, carrying, threshing, and dressing corn (s).

The sheriff is not entitled to the costs of preparing a sale which has been stayed by notice of a prior act of bankruptcy (t). But otherwise he is so entitled (u); and in determining the amount for which execution is levied possession-money may be taken into account even after an injunction has been granted restraining the sheriff from sale (v).

Winding-up. Where, by reason of a winding-up order, the sheriff was ordered to deliver up money and goods seized by him, the liquidator was directed to pay the amounts due to the sheriff for levy and charges on the writs and the costs of his application for such an order (w).

Keeping possession. He will be allowed his costs of keeping possession after applying to the Court, where it is for the benefit of the parties, though it be not in furtherance of his duty (x). But where he retained out of the proceeds of a sale, which were not sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim, the expenses occasioned by keeping possession under an injunction, this was disallowed (y). If he levies and remains in possession of goods, other than those of the execution debtor without any special order from the execution creditor, he cannot recover such possession-money (z).

But if, after taking possession of the goods of a company which afterwards goes into liquidation, he is restrained from selling, he is entitled to his poundage and costs (a). And all incidental expenses may be charged where the sale takes place by order of the Court, even though it subsequently appear that the seizure was wrongful (b).

Where after seizure and before sale the execution creditor becomes disentitled to recover the debt, the sheriff cannot sell any portion of the goods in order to realize the amount of his possession-money, fees, and expenses (c).

Payment into exchequer. Where a bailiff illegally compelled the plaintiff under a threat of distraining his goods to pay him a sum of money, it was held that the fact of the bailiff's having before the commencement of the action paid over the entire sum to the sheriff, who had paid it into the Exchequer, was no defence (d).

Where an officer obtains money from a person by means of oppression, imposition, or deceit, an action will lie for its recovery (m); as, for instance, where a sheriff obtains money under the pressure of an illegal arrest (n); or under a threat to sell goods under a fi. fa. which he has no right to sell (o); or receives money in excess of that due (p); or where a toll-collector exacts an illegal or unauthorized toll (q); or where an officer levies money by seizing and selling goods upon a magistrate's conviction, which is afterwards quashed (r); or a revenue officer unlawfully seizes goods as forfeited and unlawfully detains them, and takes money which he has no right to take as the condition of their release (s).

But an action does not apparently lie against a revenue officer to recover an overpayment (t), nor to recover duties received by him after the Act which imposed them is repealed, if he has paid them over to his superior (u). Nor does it lie against a highway surveyor for failing to restore an overplus of distress to the owner, if such restoration be not properly demanded (v).

If assets in the hands of an officer have been increased by an honest mistake of law, the Court will compel him to recognize the rules of honesty, and to act accordingly (w).

Under certain statutes an action lies for a penalty for taking money under colour of office (x).

Where a sheriff's officer was sued for a penalty for extortion (y) which was not proved, but the claim was held outrageous, the action against the officer was dismissed, but without costs (z).

False Imprisonment (a).

Every confinement of the person is an imprisonment, whether it be in a common prison or in a private house, or even by forcibly detaining one in the public streets. Unlawful or false imprisonment consists in such confinement or detention without sufficient authority (b).

False imprisonment commences from the time of arrest, and Action for penalty.

lasts until the plaintiff is before the magistrates. After that it becomes malicious prosecution (c).

Actual contact is not necessary to constitute an imprisonment. Any restraint put upon the freedom of another by shew of authority or force, is sufficient to constitute an imprisonment (d), so that if a person is restrained from leaving a room or going out of a house without the presence of a constable, this infringement of his personal liberty will constitute an imprisonment (e). If you put your hand on a man, or tell him he must go with you, and he goes, supposing you have the right and the power to compel him, that is an arrest (f).

By sheriff. A person unlawfully imprisoned by a sheriff or any of his officers shall have an action against such sheriff in like manner as against any other person that should imprison him without warrant (g).

Where the bailiff having a writ of fi. fa. in his hands arrested the defendant, instead of levying on his goods, the sheriff was held liable (h). So also was he where he arrested a person who represented himself to be the person named in the writ, for detaining him after he had notice that he was not the real party (i). And he is also liable where he arrests after the return-day of the writ (j).

By constable.

If a bailiff who has a process against any one says to him, "You are my prisoner; I have a writ against you"; on which the person addressed submits, turns back, or goes with him, though the bailiff never touched him (k); or if a constable command a person to go with him, and the order is obeyed, and they walk together in the direction pointed out by the constable, in each case there is a constructive imprisonment (l). And in an action against a constable by A., he cannot defend himself under a magistrate's warrant against B., although A. was charged with felony before the magistrate, and was the person against whom the warrant was intended to issue (m); nor if

(d) The practice of "shadowing" by the police, which has been the subject of debate on several occasions of late in Parliament, would appear to fall within these words. And even if the party be suspected of felony about to be committed on which arrest might take place, it seems doubtful whether this practice could be justified. Cases have occurred in which false charges have been made as a cover for this process.

(e) Warner v. Riddiford, 4 C. B. N. S. 206. The practice of watching premises would appear to come within these words.

But the forcibly preventing a party from proceeding in a particular direction, e.g. along a public footway, is not an imprisonment (o). And a constable on duty at a police station is justified in detaining a person brought there in charge and delivered to him by a constable, although he may have been illegally arrested (p).

The keeper of a prison who receives and detains one apprehended and charged in custody under a warrant runs the risk of the warrant having been executed against the proper person, and if by mistake it be executed against authority, he is liable (q). So also is he if where a duty to discharge is cast upon him, he detain a person longer (r). By gaoler.

But where the cause does not appear on the face of the warrant or order and he complies with its terms, he is not liable (s).

Every unlawful detainer of a prisoner after he has gained a right to be discharged is a fresh imprisonment (t). Generally.

All persons aiding and assisting in the unlawful confinement of another are responsible in damages for the trespass, although they had nothing to do with the original arrest, and had no knowledge that the arrest and imprisonment were unlawful at the time they had a hand in it (u). But this does not apply to a constable arresting on a hue and cry (v), or on a reasonable charge made by another person (w). If a wrong person be arrested by mistake, all persons causing the arrest are liable for the injury, unless the party complaining has brought the injury on himself by his own misstatements and misrepresentations (x).

A justification of an imprisonment on the ground that the plaintiff had committed felony, and an abandonment of the plea at the trial, or a failure to prove it, are evidence of malice, and a great aggravation of the original wrong; but a justification on the ground that a felony had been committed, and that the defendant had reasonable and probable cause to suspect the plaintiff guilty of it is rather in the nature of an apology for the defendant's conduct (y). The onus of justification is on the defendant, and therefore in trespass for arrest on a warrant the plaintiff need not produce the warrant (z). It lies on the defendant to plead and prove affirmatively the existence of reasonable Procedure.
Pleading.

cause as his justification (a). A plea which professes to justify several assaults and false imprisonments laid in separate counts, must shew distinct occasions upon which the defendant was justified in committing each particular trespass (b).

The question of reasonable and probable cause is for the judge (c).

Where, under statutes, constables are authorized to arrest offenders in their view or found committing offences, a plea justifying an arrest must allege that the offence was committed within view of the constable, or the offender was found committing such offence, as the case may be (d). And where a statute authorized a constable to remove an offender, a plea stating that he was so removed and detained in custody, was held no justification, such detention having been unlawful (e).

Evidence.

Proof must be given of circumstances from which the judge and jury may decide whether there was or was not a restraint or a detention of the person, and it is not enough for witnesses to swear that they considered the plaintiff was in custody, nor to shew that the defendant at a police office stood before the plaintiff and said, "You cannot go away till the magistrate comes," if it appears that he relinquished that attitude, and went to another part of the office before the plaintiff had made any attempt to depart (f).

If A. imprisons B., and in continuance of the imprisonment delivers him into the charge of C., who keeps him in custody, the acts and declarations of C. are evidence against A. (g). If a witness who admits that he stole similar property at the same time is called to sustain the defence, his testimony ought to receive some confirmation (h). The defendant cannot cross-examine as to the bad character of the plaintiff, nor as to previous charges against him (i).

A conviction of a third party for the same offence as that for which plaintiff was arrested cannot be put in, unless the defendant knew of it at the time of the arrest (j). And a conviction which when put in proves to be informal, has no weight (k).

Reasonable and probable cause of suspicion is good evidence in mitigation of damages under not guilty (l).

Every expense that the plaintiff necessarily incurs in order to restore himself to a complete state of freedom is recoverable as damages (m). But he cannot recover in respect of having been detained whereby he missed an opportunity of being taken into employment (n); nor for illness caused by refusal of defendant to send for medical assistance, unless the jury find that the detention was unreasonable (o). The Court never interferes with the discretion of the jury, unless the damages are grossly excessive or founded on a mistaken or improper view (p). Where some working men were unlawfully imprisoned for six hours, being in the meantime well fed and cared for, and the jury awarded £300 to each, the Court refused to set aside the verdict (q). And where a person was arrested on a bad warrant for arrears of poor-rate, the damages were held to be the amount he had paid under protest on arrest (r).

The plaintiff may in his notice of trial, and the defendant may within four days afterwards, or such extended time as may be allowed, claim to have the action tried by a jury (s).

The action must be commenced within four years next after the cause thereof (t).

Malicious Prosecution.

A malicious prosecution is a prosecution instituted by one person against another without reasonable and probable cause, and which has failed. It commences at the time the plaintiff is before the magistrates. Prior to this, it is false imprisonment (u).

Prosecuting a person with any other motive than bringing a guilty party to justice is a malicious prosecution, as where it is instituted with the view of terrifying parties from the commission of some prevalent offence (v).

If there be no reasonable or probable cause for a charge, the action lies (w), and so also does it for maliciously obtaining or executing a warrant (x).

Malicious prosecution.

Damages.

Jury.

Limitation.

Counsel's opinion is of no avail to a man who has instituted such a prosecution (y).

On the principle that nemo bis vexari debet pro eadem causa it has been held that there can be no appeal from an acquittal (z). Any such proceedings, therefore, would appear to be in the nature of a malicious prosecution.

The necessary ingredients in this action are:—

1. Malice.

1. Malice, which may be either express or implied.

To sustain the averment of malice the charge must be wilfully false (a). But if in the opinion of the judge there was no reasonable or probable cause, the jury may from that fact alone infer malice (b).

Scandalous charges and accusations made by the defendant against the plaintiff in connection with the prosecution are evidence of malice. And so are any statements or declarations made by the defendant tending to shew that he was actuated by spite and ill-will in instituting the prosecution (c).

It is no answer to shew that the charge preferred against the plaintiff was not sustainable in point of law (d).

The question of malice is never in terms left to the jury (e).

2. Want of reasonable and probable cause.

2. Want of reasonable and probable cause.

Reasonable and probable cause has been defined by a learned judge as an honest belief in the guilt of the accused based upon a full conviction founded upon reasonable grounds of the existence of a state of circumstances, which, assuming them to be true, would reasonably lead any ordinarily prudent and cautious man, placed in the position of the accuser, to the conclusion that the prisoner charged was probably guilty of the crime imputed (f).

Information received from persons apparently respectable and believed to be credible is sufficient (g). The disbelief of the party making the charge is some want of probable cause, notwithstanding other evidence may have shewn that there was prima facie probable cause (h). The evidence need not be sufficient to convict, nor need it be confirmed at the time of the plaintiff's arrest (i).

Similarity of handwriting has been held not per se reasonable and probable cause for preferring a charge (j).

The question of reasonable and probable cause is for the judge (k).

3. Prosecution determined in plaintiff's favour.

The plaintiff, to recover in this action must have had judgment in his favour in the prosecution (l). An acquittal through defect in the indictment is sufficient (m), but if it be the result of deliberation, and the evidence be such as to cause the jury to pause, it is doubtful whether it is so (n). The prosecution being non-proved is not of itself evidence of malice (o).

3. Prosecution determined in plaintiff's favour.

4. Allegation and proof of damage having been sustained by the plaintiff is essential (p).

4. Damage.

The plaintiff must in this action allege and prove affirmatively the non-existence of reasonable and probable cause (q). Every allegation proper to support the action, namely, that the defendant falsely, maliciously, and without any reasonable or probable cause, caused the plaintiff to be indicted, and the trial and acquittal must be pleaded (r).

Procedure.

It is not necessary to state that there was an information, if the defendants procured a warrant to issue; but if the claim state that the defendant made information on oath, on which the magistrate granted the warrant, the information must be proved and a recital of it in the warrant is not sufficient (s). But the claim is sustained, although it appear that the defendant preferred the indictment unwillingly and solely because he was bound over to do so, if it appear that he was himself the cause of his being bound over by originally making a malicious charge (t).

Where the bill has not been found, an action cannot be supported without evidence of express malice as well as the want of probable cause (u).

The defendant cannot plead probable cause with not guilty, as the two pleas are incompatible (v).

The plaintiff must give evidence of malice express or implied. It cannot be implied from mere proof of the prosecutor not appearing when called (w).

Evidence.

In an action for maliciously procuring plaintiff to be arrested on a charge of larceny, defendant cannot give evidence to shew that the plaintiff's character was suspicious, and that his house had been searched on former occasions (x). If the defendant gives evidence of probable cause, a witness may, however, be asked whether the plaintiff was not a man of notoriously bad character (y). But where the plaintiff does not expressly claim damages in respect of injury to reputation, general evidence as to his character is inadmissible (z).

Damages. There are three sorts of damages in these cases, either of which is sufficient to sustain an action, namely, damage to a man's reputation, person or property (a). And every expense which the plaintiff has necessarily incurred in order to defend himself from the false and malicious charge is recoverable (b).

Jury. The right to trial by jury is the same as that in actions for false imprisonment (c).

Limitation. The action must be commenced within four years after the cause of such action and not after (d).

Public Nuisance.

Public nuisance. Every injury to public rights which affects all persons alike, such as an obstruction in a public thoroughfare merely impeding the right of passage and rendering the way less convenient, is remediable only by indictment (e). But for any special injury which affects an individual beyond his fellows, such as being delayed in making a journey and compelled to take a circuitous route (f), or driving against the obstruction during a dark night, compensation in damages may be obtained (g).

The prevention of customers from going to a colliery by obstructing the highway per quod, the benefit of the colliery was lost, and the coals dug up depreciated in value, is such a special and particular damage as to enable the owner of the colliery to maintain an action for the private injury resulting from the nuisance (h).

Limitation. The limitation for actions of the first kind is four, and for those of the second kind six years (i).

Slander.

Slander. Slander is a false and malicious defamation of character (j), expressed verbally, tending to injure the reputation of another and expose him to public ridicule, hatred, or contempt (k).

The action is not maintainable without proof of actual damage caused to the plaintiff, except where the words impute the commission of a crime, unfitness for society, or misconduct in business (l).

And to call a man a felon after he has been convicted but received a pardon or undergone his sentence is actionable (m), without proof of such damage.

Words merely conveying suspicion will not sustain the action (n), but it is otherwise if they impute a crime, though it is described in vulgar language and not in technical terms (o), and the offence imputed need not be an indictable offence (p).

However honestly the party who publishes a libel believes it to be true, if it is untrue in fact, the law implies malice, unless the occasion justifies the act, and this is a question of law (q). A publication may be a libel on a private person which would not be so on a person in a public capacity, but any imputation of unjust or corrupt motives is equally libellous in either case (r).

Allegorical terms of a defamatory character or of evil import, such as imputing to a person the qualities of a "frozen snake" in the fable, are libellous per se without innuendoes to explain their meaning (s).

Repetition of injurious rumour is actionable unless the occasion be privileged, and it is no justification that the rumour existed (t). Where slanderous words are not actionable per se, no action will lie against the original utterer for damages resulting from a repetition unauthorized by him (u), nor where the special damage was due not to the slander as uttered by the defendant, but to its repetition (v). It is no answer to shew that the slander was heard from another, naming the person and the time without shewing that the defendant believed it to be true, and spoke the words on a justifiable occasion (w). If the defendant at the time of speaking the words give the name of the person from whom he heard it, this is no justification; but if he did this, and at the trial proves this fact, it will go in mitigation of damages (x).

Privileged Communications.

Privileged
cations.

Privileged communications comprehend all statements made bonâ fide in the performance of a duty, or with a fair and reasonable purpose of protecting the interests of the person making them. In such cases the onus of proving malice lies on the plaintiff (y).

Charges and communications which would otherwise be slanderous are protected if made bonâ fide in the prosecution of an inquiry into a suspected crime. It is for the jury to say whether the circumstances warranted the charge made by the defendant, whether it was made bonâ fide or before more persons than was necessary, or in language stronger than the occasion justified (z). A criminary communication made by a public officer is privileged if it is confined to a statement of facts which it is his duty to investigate, and contains nothing but what he believes to be true. But if he imputes improper motives to others, and accuses them of attempts to extort money by misrepresentation, if irrelevant calumny is introduced, or if it contains strictures upon the motives and conduct of others which the facts stated do not warrant, he will exceed his privilege, and subject himself to an action for damages (a).

Words spoken by a medical officer to the steward of a public school to the effect that the plaintiff, a butcher, who supplied meat to the school, sold bad meat, were held privileged in the absence of malice (b).

A witness in a court of justice is absolutely privileged as to anything he may say as a witness, having reference to the inquiry on which he is called, and a statement as to another matter made to justify him in consequence of a question going to his credit is within the rule (c).

Injunction.

The Court has jurisdiction to restrain a person making slanderous statements, but such jurisdiction will be exercised with great care (d).

Procedure.

Where a plea of justification contains several charges, and the prosecutor replies generally denying the whole, the prosecutor is entitled to a verdict, unless the defendant proves to the satisfaction of the jury the truth of all the material allegations; and if the defendant fails to do this, it is no ground for a new trial that with respect to some of the charges on which the jury gave a verdict against the defendant, the finding was against the weight of evidence (e). A defence stating the matter complained of "is true in substance and effect" means true in every particular, and if the defendant does not prove such statement to be true, the defence is not proved, although he proves facts of the same description (f). Where the claim alleged that one, at the request and by the direction of the defendant, uttered the slander, the plaintiff was ordered to give particulars of the names of the persons to whom, and of the place at which such slander was uttered (g).

But where a slander imputing a specific charge is justified in the defence, particulars of such plea are unnecessary, and will not be ordered (h).

Evidence will be rejected where the particular facts and circumstances sought to be proved are not stated or referred to in the defence (i). A communication being shewn to be privileged, it lies on the plaintiff to prove malice in fact; in order, however, to entitle him to have the question of malice left to the jury, he need not shew circumstances necessarily leading to the conclusion that malice existed, or such as are inconsistent with its non-existence, but they must be such as raise a probability of malice, and be more consistent with its existence than with its non-existence (j).

Evidence.

The defendant may (after notice to the plaintiff delivered with his defence) give in evidence in mitigation of damages, that he made or offered an apology before the commencement of the action, or as soon thereafter as he had opportunity to do so (k). Where the defendant does not by his defence assert the truth of the statement complained of, he cannot give evidence in chief to mitigate damages as to the circumstances of publication or the character of the plaintiff unless by leave of the judge or seven days before trial he furnish particulars to the plaintiff of the matters as to which he intends to give evidence (l).

Whenever injury has been done to the fair fame, reputation, or character of the plaintiff, the jury is justified in giving such a sum by way of damages as marks their sense of the maliciousness or recklessness of the wrongdoer in offering the insult and injury, their belief in the groundlessness of the charge and their desire to vindicate the character of the plaintiff (m), and the Court will never interfere unless the damages are manifestly outrageous and extravagant (n).

Damages.

Where the plaintiff obtained a verdict with nominal damages, he was held entitled to his full costs (o).

Jury. The right to trial by jury is the same as in actions of false imprisonment (p).

Limitation. The action must be commenced within two years next after the words spoken, and not after (q).

Trespass to Personalty.

Trespass to personalty. Every direct forcible injury or act disturbing the possession of goods without the owner's consent is a trespass; and if it amount to a deprivation of possession to such an extent as to be inconsistent with the rights of the owner, it then becomes a wrongful conversion (r). A person who has moved the goods of another without a lawful right to do so, even to put them out of the way, is liable for the natural consequences of the removal (s).

Every interference with a man's lawful business or occupation without lawful excuse is actionable, such as driving the plaintiff's tenants from their holdings by menaces (t), or preventing people by the use of threats and intimidation from trading with the plaintiff's vessel in a foreign port (u), or from dealing at the plaintiff's shop, or from sending their children to the plaintiff's school, or placing obstructions and impediments in the way of the exercise of the right of free access to a man's place of business (v).

Sheriff.
Execution against
person.

With regard to the sheriff, it is laid down that if he seize goods after a tender of the debt and costs, he is liable (w), but not if he take goods on an execution which is afterwards set aside for irregularity (x), or if he merely seize goods which are privileged from seizure (y).

Trespass vi et armis lies against a sheriff for taking the goods of A. instead of B. by his bailiff upon a fi. fa. (z). And if there are two persons of the same name and address, and a writ issues against one of them, and the sheriff through inadvertence or mistake executes the writ against the wrong person, he is liable (a).

Where under a fi. fa. against A. the furniture in his house was seized and sold, where he lived with a woman with whom he had gone through the ceremony of marriage, and to whom the goods belonged before marriage, it was held that the woman having afterwards discovered that the marriage was void, might maintain an action against the sheriff, and recover the value of the goods, although it exceeded the price for which they were sold (b).

But where the property belonged to a woman who cohabited with the debtor, assumed his name, and represented herself as his wife, the action was not maintainable (c).

The sheriff is liable to an action by the owner of goods lent on hire if having seized them under an execution against the hirer, he sells the entire property in them; but the hirer must have given notice to the sheriff on the seizure (d), and for the mere seizure without sale he is not liable (e).

As to interpleader proceedings, see ante (f). Where neither the premises nor the goods belong to the debtor, the sheriff may on such proceedings be protected against an action for trespass, or for wrongful seizure if no substantial grievance has been done (g).

And where the sheriff is directed to levy on the goods of a wrong person, he is under no liability for so doing (h).

An action lies at the suit of an administrator for taking away the goods of an intestate (i). But where an executrix used the goods of her testator as her own, and afterwards married, and then treated them as the goods of the husband, it was held that the action was not maintainable (j).

A landlord may maintain an action against him for removing goods before the rent has been satisfied (k). Where the bailiff in possession of goods under a landlord's distress received a fi. fa. from a sheriff and sold the goods under it, the sheriff was held liable to action at the suit of the landlord (l). Landlord.

Where the sheriff sells more than sufficient to satisfy the debt and costs he is liable for the excess (m). And he is also liable, if he sell for less money than ought to have been obtained (n). But if a judgment debtor have a qualified interest only as a bailee in goods seized, and the sheriff, having no notice thereof, sells them absolutely, he is not guilty of a conversion by the Seizure.

mere act of selling. It must be shewn that he parted with the possession of the goods and caused them to be used by the purchaser (o). And if he sell goods under a fi. fa., and afterwards the judgment is reversed, the defendant cannot have restitution, but the value for which they were sold (p).

County Court.

In the County Court, where the judge had adjudicated in favour of a claimant whose house had been broken and entered and his goods seized and taken away as the goods of an execution debtor, it was held that the claimant could not afterwards proceed in an action of trespass for taking away the goods (q).

Water
bailiff.

And where a water-bailiff removed what proved to be an illegal fixed engine from a salmon-river, it was held that an action against him for such removal was not sustainable (r).

Surveyor.

Nor does an action lie against a surveyor for removing a bar to a public way (s).

Distress (t).

With regard to wrongful distress, it has been held that the jurisdiction of the High Court is not ousted by the Taxes Act (u). And where the plaintiff who was the owner and occupier of the vicarial tithes and occupier of the rectorial tithes on which the land-tax had been redeemed, was assessed to land-tax for a gross sum for both, which, on demand, he refused to pay, whereupon the collector distrained, it was held that trespass lay for the distress, and that the plaintiff was not bound to appeal (v). A conviction on a statute on the face of it, not pursuing the previous statute, nor shewing that any offence had been committed, is bad, and although it has not been quashed, its invalidity may be taken advantage of on the trial of an action of trespass for a distress taken under a warrant grounded upon it (w). But a party making a wrongful distress for two causes as to one of which he is entitled to notice of action, is liable in trespass as to the other (x). And parties executing distress for poor-rate are liable if they commit any excess not excused by law (y). And so is a highway surveyor if he execute a warrant for highway-rate against a person not chargeable (z).

right to take as the condition of their release, he is liable to action (a). But where goods liable to duty have been landed and warehoused and examined by officers in the regular execution of their duty, no action can be maintained against such officers for the detention of goods under a belief that they are liable to forfeiture, though it ultimately appears that they were not so liable (b). And condemnation in the Exchequer is conclusive against any such action being maintainable (c).

And where a police officer came into possession of a ring which the plaintiff was supposed to have stolen, but was acquitted on the hearing of the charge, and no order having been made by the magistrate with regard to it, refused to give it up, it was held that the officer was not liable to action at the suit of the plaintiff for the detention (d).

Where a postmaster delivered up letters of a bankrupt to a trustee believing bonâ fide that he was entitled to them, it was held he was not liable under 9 Anne c. 10, s. 40, for wittingly, willingly, and knowingly detaining letters and causing them to be detained and opened (e).

The Court will not, in the absence of a trust, restrain the sheriff from selling the goods of a stranger found upon the land of a person against whom execution had issued (f). But if goods have been wrongfully seized by him it is otherwise, and he may be restrained from selling or remaining in possession, but the execution creditor should either be made a party to the action or notice should be served on him before the injunction is granted. The plaintiff will not get his costs of such an action prematurely brought (g). Injunction.

In an action against the sheriff the claim after reciting that two writs of fi. fa. had been delivered to him to be executed stated that defendant as such sheriff, under colour of the writs, wrongfully seized the goods of the plaintiff to a much greater value than necessary to satisfy, and sold the same. This was held sufficient (h). Procedure.

In actions for removing goods seized without paying the rent after notice of its being due, no averment of notice to the execution-creditor is necessary (i). But if the action is founded on the statute, notice to the sheriff is always alleged and should not be omitted (j). The defence of "not guilty" admits the seizure by the sheriff, and it is not necessary to produce the warrant to connect him with the officer (k). And where in such an action the defence was that the sheriff seized goods which were alleged to belong to S., but which did not, in fact, belong to him, the plaintiff was nevertheless held entitled to a verdict (l). It is not sufficient for the defendant to shew in mitigation of damages that the goods realized less than the amount of the rent, but he must prove that their actual value to the landlord at the time of removal was less (m).

Where a sheriff's officer, having a fi. fa. against A. called at his house when he was from home waited till he returned, and then informed him of his business, this was held sufficient to warrant the jury in finding that the writ was executed at the time of the officer's entry (n).

A sheriff justifying in trespass under a writ of fi. fa. need not shew his authority (o).

Evidence.

In an action for abusing the process of the Court in order illegally to compel a party to give up his goods, it is not necessary to prove that the action under which the process was improperly employed has determined, nor to aver that the process was sued out without reasonable and probable cause (p).

An affidavit made by a sheriff's officer under the Interpleader Act respecting the goods is admissible to prove the officer to be the servant of the sheriff (q).

And where plaintiff, being owner and occupier of the vicarial tithes and occupier of the rectorial tithes, on which latter tithe the land-tax had been redeemed, was assessed to land-tax on a gross sum for which on refusal, the collector distrained, it was held that the demand having been made for a sum alleged to be due for a quarter then expired, defendant could not justify the distress by shewing that a sum was due at the expiration of the current quarter for vicarial tithes which would cover the sum distrained for (r).

In an action for excessive distress it is not necessary to prove express malice (s).

Damages.

Damages must be both alleged and proved in action against the sheriff for wrongful seizure (t), and any special damage that has been sustained is recoverable (u).

Where the defendants had become trespassers ab initio by breaking the door, the jury were rightly directed that they might, even on the defence of not guilty, give damages in respect of all the injuries complained of (v).

In an action for removing goods without paying the rent due the measure of damages is prima facie the amount of rent, but the sheriff may prove that the value of the goods removed was less than that amount (w). The price of the goods sold is not necessarily, but is usually, the measure of damages if the sale be wrongful (x).

In an action for taking goods under irregular process, where special damage is alleged and claimed but not proved, the plaintiff is entitled to nominal, or such substantial damages as the jury thinks fit (y).

Whenever a public officer has wrongfully seized and detained goods from the owner, the latter is entitled to recover the loss resulting from the wrongful act, so that if the property detained has fallen in value in the market, the plaintiff is entitled to add the amount of that to the damage he has sustained (z).

The action must be commenced within four years after the cause thereof, and not after (a). Limitation.

Trespass to Realty.

Every unauthorized entry upon or direct interference with another's land is a trespass for which an action lies without proof of actual damage (b). And if a man abuse an authority given him by the law as distinguished from that of the party, as in leave and licence, he becomes a trespasser ab initio (c). But mere non-feasance does not constitute him such a trespasser (d). Trespass to realty.

If there is an abuse of authority by which the party becomes a trespasser ab initio the plaintiff is entitled to recover damages as well for the part or injury which would have been justified if there had been no abuse as for the part which is directly caused by the abuse (e). And the rule that a party cannot be made a trespasser by relation is only applicable where the act complained of was lawful at the time (f).

This action will lie for continuing on the premises and disturbing the plaintiff's possession after the time allowed by law (g), or after distress made (h).

If a sheriff remain on premises for the purpose of putting the Sheriff.

purchaser of a lease in possession he would be liable to this action at the suit of the debtor if in possession, although the premises had been sold and transferred (i).

County Court.

Where a judge of the County Court adjudicated in favour of a claimant whose house had been broken and entered and his goods seized and taken away as those of the execution debtor, it was held that the claimant was afterwards entitled to proceed for the special damage occasioned by the wrongful breaking and entry (j).

Constables.

Where a search warrant was executed by a constable to whom it was not addressed, this was held the proper form of action (k). But where a constable on hearing a noise in a public house at one o'clock in the night, entered the house, the door being open, the action was held not to lie (l).

Overseers.

Overseers executing a distress for poor-rate are liable if they commit any excess not excused by law (m).

Highway
surveyor.

A surveyor who had removed by order of the highway board the locks from a gate placed across a footpath by the occupier of the land through which it ran, was held liable to this action notwithstanding the order of the board (n), and so also was he where he dug away the plaintiff's bank without authority, although evidence was given that the property was thereby improved (o), and where on an order to lop trees he topped them (p).

Forcible
entry.

An attempt to eject by force a person having a legal title to land brings the person who makes it within the statute against forcible entry (q), and damages cannot be recovered in such case (r), except for independent wrong committed in the course of such entry (s). But an allegation vi et armis in an action for breaking and entering does not imply a forcible entry (t).

Injunction.

The Court will not, it appears, grant an injunction in respect of an interference with a church way at the suit of a parishioner, the ecclesiastical courts having jurisdiction in such cases (u). But a local authority interfering with property in an unauthorized manner, as, e.g. when not authorized under the Public Health Act, will be restrained, and the plaintiff will not be left to his remedy under the compensation clauses (v). appeal to a superior board does not oust the jurisdiction of the Court (w).

If a public board exceed the due limits of their authority, and commit acts of nuisance, whether of a public or private (x) nature, the Court may restrain by injunction (y), unless the jurisdiction is expressly negatived (z).

As regards apprehended injury, the Court will not usually interfere unless the damage will be irreparable (a).

If the defendant relies upon the defence of leave and licence, he must prove either an express permission from the plaintiff (b), or circumstances from which such permission may fairly be implied (c). Procedure.

The defendant may justify under a sufficient legal process, if he had it in fact at the time, although he declared then that he entered for another cause (d).

To render a defendant liable as a trespasser ab initio, facts sufficient to support this must be stated in the claim (e).

The action may be well laid to have been done under a false charge and assertion, for that is laid only as a matter of aggravation, and the jury may give damages for the trespass, as it is aggravated by such false charge (f). In an action for breaking and entering plaintiff's house and expelling him therefrom, the breaking and entering are the gist of the action, and the expulsion is merely aggravation; therefore a justification as to the breaking and entering will cover the whole claim (g).

The defendant may give in evidence under not guilty that he entered by virtue of a warrant, and was turned out, whereupon he committed the trespasses complained of (h). But a party who insists on remaining on the land of another against his will, and therefore prima facie against right, ought to shew all the circumstances which make such possession lawful and abridge the just rights of property (i). Evidence.

Where the defendant put in an informal affidavit to the effect that he had entered under a warrant to search for dutiable goods, it was held no defence (j). And where a local authority is sued for a trespass, it is incumbent on them to prove affirmatively from the statute the existence of the power which they claim to exercise (k).

Damages.

Where the defendants had become trespassers ab initio by breaking the door, the jury were rightly directed that they might, even on the defence of not guilty, give damages in respect of all the injuries complained of (l).

The true criterion of damages has been held to be the whole injury which the plaintiff has received (m). If the entry is made after notice or warning not to trespass or is a wilful or impertinent intrusion upon a man's domestic privacy, or an insulting invasion of his proprietary rights, a very serious cause of action will arise, and exemplary damages be recoverable (n).

But it has been held that a plaintiff is not entitled to recover as damages the costs of setting aside a warrant, and all subsequent proceedings under which the trespass was committed (o).

Limitation.

The action must be commenced within six years next after the cause thereof, and not after (p).

CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS.

Attachment.

Attachment is the punitive process to which the High Court resorts for excess of public duty on the part of its officers. As a remedy to an individual it is like all other public process only available where damage has been sustained through such excess of duty, by such individual (a). Criminal proceedings.
Attachment.

Being confined to officers of the Court it is only available against the Sheriff, the Admiralty Marshal, the Tipstaff, and the High Bailiff (b).

As against the sheriff it has been laid down that attachment may be moved for in any of the following cases:—

Arrest without authority.

Breaking doors without excuse.

Corrupt practices.

Detaining person till he pays money for his release.

Extortion.

False return, where circumstances of hardship to plaintiff.

Force, using needless.

Illtreating persons arrested.

Neglecting to execute (c).

The process cannot be executed on Sunday (d). But it must be moved for within a reasonable time (e).

If the sheriff has executed the writ and has in his hands or possession, the proceeds of the execution, he is at once liable to this process (f). But the old rule as to attachment absolute in the first instance is abrogated (g).

The death of the defendant will not remove the sheriff's liability (h); but if any of the proceedings against the sheriff be irregular, the Court will set aside the attachment (i).

The service of the writ must be personal on the sheriff or his deputy (j).

An order for attachment or committal must be applied for on notice (k).

Information (m).

Information.

Every public officer commits a misdemeanour who in the exercise or under colour of exercising the duties of his office, does any illegal act, or abuses any discretionary power with which he is invested by law, from an improper motive, the existence of which motive may be inferred, either from the nature of the act or the circumstances of the case. But an illegal exercise of authority caused by a mistake as to the law, made bonâ fide, is not a misdemeanour (n).

An officer executing a warrant upon a person absolutely privileged would render himself liable to this process (o).

If police officials appear as advocates before justices in cases in which they are not properly prosecutors, they are guilty of misdemeanour by virtue of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 2, and the proceedings being irregular, a conviction will be quashed (p).

Refusing admission to persons into a Court of petty sessions, when an open Court is another instance (q).

Where, some few years since, a murder had been committed, a police official held a sort of informal inquiry into the circumstances attending the murder. This was clearly an excess of authority, and rendered the officer liable to this process (r).

And the same would apply in the case of the illegal practice of interrogating persons under arrest (s). In the case of any persons whether under arrest or not, there is of course no obligation to answer. Such obligation is usually confined to witnesses in open Court.

An information lies also against officers employed by or under the post office if they suffer letters to be hindered, delayed, or opened (t), and also against persons not so employed (u).

It also lies against highway surveyors for not filling up and fencing holes within due time (v), for causing stones or other obstructions to remain at night on the highway to the danger of passengers (w), for digging for materials whereby any bridge, building, &c., is damaged (x), and in these cases the civil liability remains.

Tax collectors and overseers are also liable to this process for taking more than the fees allowed on a distress (y). And so are workhouse and asylum officers for unlawful detention of a lunatic (z), or for illtreatment (a), or abuse of a female lunatic (b). But the mode of procedure in these cases is limited to that of prior consent of the Crown law officers, except where commenced by superior officers (c).

As has been above stated, inasmuch as the sheriff, Admiralty Marshal, Tipstaff, and High Bailiff are liable to attachment, this remedy is not open against them (d).

Assault and Battery.

An assault is an attempt to offer with force and violence to do a corporal hurt to another as by striking at him with or without a weapon, or presenting a gun at him at such a distance to which the gun will carry, or pointing a pitchfork at him standing within reach of it, or by holding up one's fist to him, or by any such like act done in an angry, threatening manner (e). Assault and battery.

Any injury whatsoever, be it ever so small, being actually done to the person of a man, in an angry, revengeful, rude, or insolent manner, as by spitting in his face, or anyway touching him in anger, or violently jostling him out of the way, are batteries (f).

A magistrate has no right to order the examination of the person of a prisoner. Any officer making examination in pursuance of such order is therefore guilty of assault (g), and so are officers who cut unnecessarily the hair of a pauper in the poorhouse (h).

But it is doubtful whether the mere presentation of a pistol, which is in fact not loaded, at another is an assault (i), and it is no battery to lay one's hand gently on another whom an officer has a warrant to arrest (j). But if more force than necessary be used it is otherwise (k).

A person charged with assault and battery may be found guilty of either offence (l).

A battery cannot be justified by an officer unless there was resistance in the party (m), and though one cannot justify by pleading son assault demesne in the indictment, this may be given in evidence upon not guilty (n).

It is a good defence to prove that the battery occurred by misadventure (o), or that it occurred in arrest on legal process (p), provided no greater force than necessary was used (q).

It is also a good defence to shew that the complaint has been heard and determined by two justices (r).

Common Nuisance.

Common
nuisance.

A common nuisance is indictable at common law.

Every injury to public rights which affects all parties alike, such as an obstruction in a public thoroughfare merely impeding the right of passage and rendering the way less convenient, is only remediable by indictment (s). And all injuries to a highway such as digging a ditch or making a hedge across it, laying timber upon it, or doing any act whereby it is rendered less commodious to the public, are nuisances at common law (t).

Although an Act of Parliament authorizes alterations or blocking up of a highway, yet if these are not carried out with reasonable care and cause unnecessary danger to persons using the highway, the person carrying out such alterations, &c., may be indicted for obstruction (u).

dropping.

Another instance of common nuisance is eavesdropping, which consists in loitering under walls or eaves of a house, to hearken after discourse and thereupon to frame slanderous and mischievous tales. Offenders are apparently indictable at the sessions, and liable to be fined and bound over to good behaviour (v).

Conspiracy.

Conspiracy.

By the common law, liberty of a man's mind and will, how he should bestow himself and his means, his talents and his industry, is as much the subject of the law's protection as is that of his body. Therefore, if two or more persons agreed to co-operate against that liberty of thought and freedom of will, they would be guilty of a conspiracy (w).

A conspiracy is an agreement between two or more persons:—

1. Falsely to charge another with a crime either from a malicious or vindictive motive or feeling towards the party, or for the purpose of extorting money from him.

This does not extend to the case where persons consult and agree to prosecute a person who is guilty, or against whom there are reasonable grounds of suspicion (x).

2. Wrongfully to injure or prejudice a third person or any body of men in any other manner.

Such as that to injure a man in his trade or profession (y), or to charge a man as the reputed father of a bastard (z); but not to commit a mere civil trespass (a).

3. To commit any offence (b).

This would apply to the case of officers conspiring with others (not officers) (c) to do that which would be illegal in themselves such as “shadowing” and watching premises (d); and also to perpetrate outrages—as appears to have been done in Ireland, and perhaps in this country also. This latter would constitute in the officer concerned misprision of felony (e), which consists in knowledge that a felony has been committed and concealment of the fact.

4. To do any act with intent to pervert the course of justice.

Such as that of justices to certify that a highway was in repair when they knew it was otherwise (f), and that of procuring persons to commit offences, or to spread rumours that offences are about to be committed, with a view to create general alarm, and in order to obtain rewards for the discovery of offenders or supposed offenders (g).

5. To effect a legal purpose with a corrupt intent or by improper means (h).

Nothing need be done in pursuance of the conspiracy (i), and the indictment need not state the overt acts used to effect the intended mischief (j). The word “falsely” need not be used in the indictment, nor the particular charge be specified, nor need it be laid that the party charged was acquitted (k).

A defence attempting to justify one of the overt acts is bad (l).

It is not necessary to prove any direct or immediate injury, or even to shew any specific overt act (m). The fact of conspiring need not be proved, but may be collected from other circumstances (n).

Individuals doing individual acts, but with a combined end previously determined on, is evidence of a conspiracy (o).

Extortion.

Extortion. This offence, which is punishable by fine and imprisonment, consists in the taking of money by any officer by colour of his office, either where none is due at all, or not so much as is due, or where it is not yet due (p).

A threat to accuse a man of a crime with intent to extort money is a felony (q). The threat may be made personally or to a third person with intent that it should be communicated (r). It must be a threat to accuse or an accusation. If A. be in custody for an offence, and the defendant threaten to procure witnesses to prove the charge, it is not sufficient (s), but it need not be a threat to accuse before a judicial tribunal (t). And it is immaterial whether the prosecutor be innocent or guilty of the offence imputed (u), if the object be to extort money by means of the accusation (v).

With regard to the sheriff, he is not liable for the act of his officer in this case (w). The under-sheriff is, however, personally liable to this process if he refuse to execute until he has received his fees (x).

It is extortion to arrest a man in order to obtain a release for him (y), or to obtain money from a prisoner by any colourable means (z); and so also was it held to be where a collector of duty obtained a sum of money from a person on the allegation, contrary to the fact, that it was due. And in the same case it was held that the mere fact of the officer having paid the money over to his principal made it none the less extortion (a).

Where an officer of the local authority under the Public Health Act was paid extra for work not included in his original agreement, it was held he was not liable for penalties as for extortion (b). But the remedy is available as against tax collectors and overseers (c).

On an indictment it is not necessary to prove that the defendant took the exact sum laid. It is for the jury to say whether the excesses were really taken as a fair charge or not (d).

There can be no accessories in this offence (e).

False Imprisonment.

False imprisonment is a misdemeanour at common law.

False imprisonment.

Every restraint of the liberty of a free man is an imprisonment (f), though it be in the high street or elsewhere, and he be not put into any prison or house (g); but merely preventing a man from proceeding along a particular way is not (h), nor if the person escape before actual arrest (i).

The officer need not to complete the arrest actually touch the person. If he lock the door of the room in which he is, it is sufficient (j).

Where a warrant has been shewn to a party who goes at the desire of the officer without compulsion, it is an imprisonment (k).

Where a prisoner in custody for a civil offence escapes, if the escape be negligent, the officer may retake him at any time without warrant (l); if voluntary, or the offender be a criminal prisoner, he cannot afterwards be retaken without a new warrant, unless the offence be one for which he might have been arrested originally without warrant (m), or it be on fresh pursuit (n).

If a prosecutor fail in proving an imprisonment, he may still prove an assault and battery (o).

Inciting to Commit an Offence.

This is indictable at common law.

Inciting to commit an offence.

The offence of soliciting and inciting a man to commit a felony, is, where no such felony is actually committed, a misdemeanour only. Where the felony is committed, it is a felony (p).

To solicit a servant to steal his master's goods is a misdemeanour, though it be not charged in the indictment that the servant stole the goods, nor that any other act was done than the soliciting and inciting. Such offence is indictable at the sessions, having a tendency to a breach of the peace (q); and it is no defence that the servant purposely submitted himself to the incitement with intent to betray the inciter (r).

An attempt to suborn a man to commit perjury is a misdemeanour (s), and so is the mere attempt to solicit a person to attempt to commit an offence (t), or to pervert the course of justice by withholding evidence.

Where a defendant is indicted for a misdemeanour committed by the soliciting another to do an act which if done would amount to a felony and render the defendant also guilty of felony, it is unnecessary to negative the doing of the act, for it cannot be intended that a felony has been committed where none is charged (u).

Where a person uses words or behaviour of or in the presence of another which are calculated to provoke a breach of the peace, he may be summoned before a justice and bound over to keep the peace for a certain time (v).

But this has been held not to apply to the case of a man going about using insulting words to another (w). There must apparently be fear of corporal injury (x).

Where officers incite persons to commit crimes it is of course a conspiracy (y). The incitement which is here chiefly alluded to is that which exists in some other countries of provoking persons to offend against the law that the powers of the law may with some colour be employed against them.

The attempt to force a government reporter into a public meeting would appear to savour of this offence.

Perjury.

Perjury.

Perjury consists in the wilful taking a false oath before a Court or person having competent jurisdiction to administer it

(q) R. v. Higgins, 2 East, 5. The practice of "shadowing" must have a similar tendency, and would therefore appear to fall into this category; as also would that of employing powers not bonâ fide but simply in terrorem, on account of some motive other than the extortion of money.

(x) 1 Hawk. c. 60, ss. 6, 7; Dalt. c. 116.

(y) See ante, p. 205. Disturbances and even riots have, it is said, been at times fomented by the police. This would constitute misdemeanour or felony on the part of the officers, as the case might be.

in reference to a matter then pending in a judicial proceeding, and on a point material to the issue (z).

This and the taking a false oath in a matter not of a judicial nature or where not material are both common law misdemeanours (a).

A false affirmation is punishable in like manner (b).

The necessary points to establish are:—

1. The false oath must be taken deliberately and intentionally (c).

2. It must be either false in fact, or if true the defendant must have known it to be so (d), or if false and he swears that he believes it to be true (e).

3. The oath must have been taken before a Court or officer having competent jurisdiction to administer it (f).

4. It must be made in reference to a material part of the matter then under consideration (g).

Two or more cannot be jointly indicted for this offence (h).

Some one or more of the assignments must be proved by two witnesses, or by one witness, corroborated by proof of other material and relevant facts (i).

Fabrication of evidence when it consists of the procurement of false witnesses is subornation of perjury, and if the party tampered with does not actually take an oath, the person inciting him to do so is still liable to punishment (j). Fabrication in cases other than witnesses is a misdemeanour at common law (k). Swearing up to a point (which does not exist) in a charge, essential to its establishment, would appear to savour both of fabrication and perjury.

Subornation of perjury is punishable as perjury (l).

Trespass to Realty.

Trespass to realty is an offence under the criminal law only in the case of forcible entry. Trespass to realty.

There is no doubt an indictment will lie at common law for a forcible entry, although it is generally brought on the Act of Parliament (m). In this case there must be proof of such a force as constitutes a public breach of the peace (n).

An entry by breaking the doors or windows whether any person be in the house or not, especially if it be a dwelling-house, or where personal violence is done to the prosecutor or any of his family or servants or caretakers, or when it is accompanied with such threats of personal violence that it is calculated to prevent the prosecutor from defending his possession, has been held within the statute (o).

A mere trespass is not sufficient. There must be some shew of force calculated to prevent resistance (p).

Where the party has no right of entry, all persons in his company, as well those who do not use violence as those who do are equally guilty; but if he have a right of entry, then only those who use or threaten violence or actually abet those who do, are guilty (q). And where the defendants broke and entered the plaintiff's house to prevent him from murdering his wife, they were held justified (r).

I, &c., one of the Lords of Her Majesty's most honourable Privy Council, and principal Secretary of State, &c., These are in Her Majesty's name to authorize and require you, taking a constable to your assistance, to make strict and diligent search for (defendant, and state cause of committal), and, him having found, you are to seize and apprehend, and to bring in safe custody before me to be examined, concerning the premises, and further dealt with according to law, in the due execution whereof all mayors, sheriffs, justices of the peace, constables, and others, Her Majesty's officers, civil, and military, and loving subjects whom it may concern, are to be aiding and assisting to you, as there shall be occasion, and for so doing this shall be your warrant.

Given at St. James, &c.

To and
[two] of Her Majesty's Messengers in ordinary.

No. 32.

CORONER—EXHUMATION.

To wit:

Whereas complaint hath been made unto me, one of Her Majesty's Coroners for that on the day of this instant the body of one R. F. was privately and secretly buried in your parish in the said county, and that the said R. F. died not of a natural but a violent death, and whereas no notice of the violence of the death of the said R. F. hath been given to either of Her Majesty's coroners for the said county, whereby on Her Majesty's behalf an inquisition might have been taken, on view of the body of the said R. F. before his interment, as by law is required; these are therefore by virtue of my office in Her Majesty's name, to charge and command you, that you forthwith cause the body of the said R. F. to be taken up, and safely conveyed to in the said parish, that I, with my inquest may have a view thereof, and proceed therein according to law. Hereof fail not as you will answer the contrary at your peril.

To the Minister, Churchwardens, and Overseers.

SECRETARY OF STATE—ORDER TO REMOVE BODY.

Application having been made to me, the , one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, for permission to remove the remains of , I do hereby, in virtue of the power vested in me by the 25th section of the Act 20 & 21 Vict. c. 81, grant licence for the removal of the remains of from on condition (1) that the removal be effected with due care and attention to decency, early in the morning, that McDougall's Disinfecting Powder or chloride of lime be freely sprinkled over the coffin, the soil, or any matter that may be offensive, and (2) that .

This licence simply exempts from the penalties which would be incurred if the removal took place without a licence; it does not in any way alter civil rights. It does not, therefore, confer the right to bury the remains in any place where such right does not already exist.

This licence shall, if any of the conditions on which it is granted be not complied with, be deemed to have been void from the beginning, and, if not acted upon within twelve months from this date, shall become void.
